"BOOTLEG" LENDING OF FIRMS REVEALED

Boom Markets of 1928-'29 Fed by $20,000,000,000 Advanced From Corporation's Reserve Cash.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—A million-dollar expenditure for publicity in less than five years by the New York Stock Exchange—including the distribution of a book on short selling to members of congress—was disclosed today by senate investigators as they neared the end of their long study of the ways of Wall Street.

George U. Harris, a member of the exchange's committee on publicity, testified this amount had been expended between January 1, 1929, and September 1, 1933, that the book in question was written by J. S. Mosler, economist of the exchange, and that in his opinion the volume represented the views of exchange officials and members.

Harris took the stand after Ferdinand Pecora, the committee counsel, had produced evidence that a group of private corporations during the year 1929 had thrown call loans totaling more than $20,000,000,000 into the speculative securities market. The largest amount of such loans outstanding on one day was given as around a billion dollars.

Control Impossible. Pecora contended that lack of facilities for controlling funds from this source had made any effective control of credit flowing into the market impossible.

In response to a question from Chairman Fletcher, the attorney said that "not only the balance of the Street, but the books of some technical writers" described such transactions as "bootleg loans." They would be prohibited under a pending Fletcher-Roburn stock exchange control bill, which would require that all such advances come from the banks.

Meanwhile, the house commerce committee, engaged in hearings on the pending measure, heard Richard Whitney, president, and other officials of the stock exchange pepper the measure with objections. They have proposed a substitute which would place control of the speculative securities markets under a semi-governmental body on which the exchange would be represented, instead of giving control to the federal trade commission.

Challenges Legality. Thomas H. Gay, counsel for the exchange, contended the Fletcher-Roburn bill was unconstitutional, basing this assertion upon an argument that the securities body on which the exchange would be represented is a state and not an interstate business. He said congress had no power to regulate such a business.

Pecora and his associates planned a busy week-end studying Whitney's testimony of yesterday and today before the house committee. The exchange president will appear before the senate committee Monday afternoon.

TOUHY INDICTMENT CLOUDED BY COURT $130,000 JOBS LET BY HIGHWAY BOARD

Accusing Grand Jury Illegally Drawn, Illinois Bench Rules.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 23.—(UP)—The Illinois supreme court ruled today that the grand jury which indicted the Touhy gangsters, and many others, was illegal.

The decision did not specifically affect the conviction in Chicago today of Roger Touhy and two pals on charges of kidnapping John (Jake) the Barber Factor, but did specifically reverse the conviction of Charles Lieber, found guilty of robbery with a gun, who was indicted by a similarly selected grand jury.

The supreme court reversed the conviction because it found that the indicting grand jury was drawn from a panel of 63 men instead of 23 men as provided by statute.

The last and one of the toughest of the last decade's major crime gangs appeared definitely broken up tonight as its three leaders awaited a trip to the Joliet penitentiary. They have been sentenced to 99 years.

Roger "Cowboy" Touhy, Gus Schaefer and Albert Kater were the men awaiting imprisonment. They were found guilty at 12:30 o'clock this morning of kidnapping Factor for $70,000 ransom.

Motions for new trials will be heard tomorrow. Prosecutors predicted that a few hours later the men will be in prison. Unless they are pardoned by a governor, their minimum sentences will be 25 years.

Arrangements were pushed to try Isaac Costner and Basil Banghart on similar charges. The hunt for other members of the gang also was pressed. Among outlaw members are Charles (Ice Wagon) Connors, "Porky" Dillon and Joe Silvers.

Several other members, including two of Roger's own brothers, were shot down by rival gangsters long ago.

PERSONAL REMARK ABOUT SEN. BLACK IS LAID TO FARLEY

Postmaster-General Will Appear Today To Explain Report; Mail To Be on Poundage Basis.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Postmaster-General Farley will appear before the senate air-mail committee tomorrow to tell about a "personal remark" which Walter F. Brown, his predecessor in office, implied Farley made about Chairman Black or other democratic committee members.

Brown said Farley volunteered the "personal" expression recently when the former postmaster-general returned missing air-mail papers to the postoffice department.

Pressed by Black and Senator McCarran, democrat, Nevada, Brown flatly refused to tell what Farley said, "because he asked me not to." Just a moment before, however, he quoted the democratic cabinet member, who recently canceled all domestic air-mail contracts, as saying: "You know I haven't any sympathy with these political investigations anyhow."

Speakers gained the clear impression that the remark was about Black.

Committee investigators said they were told at the postoffice department that Farley was in Durham, N. C., and that he would appear before the committee tomorrow.

Farley Denies Remark. At Durham, Farley denied he had made a personal remark about Black or that he was not in sympathy with the inquiry.

Black said Farley would be asked to testify. A moment before he had told Brown when the latter expressed a desire to end his long session before the committee.

"I want you to wait until Postmaster-General Farley releases you from not divulging that personal remark you said he made."

Brown's story of the return to the postoffice department of the papers which he said "I was shocked to find in my possession," was a prelude to a series of sharp, hard questions by the committee chairman about air-mail contracts.

Frequently interrupting Brown's explanation with "Answer the question, won't you?" Black read from testimony by previous witnesses to the effect that a division of air-mail contracts was decided upon at a meeting of operators in which Brown participated in 1930.

If these statements are true, Mr. Brown, Black asked, "would you as a lawyer say the air-mail contracts were legal?"

"I'm not here to give legal opinions," Brown retorted. "I'm here to testify to facts."

Refuses to Answer. Black repeated the query and the former postmaster-general's voice also grew sharp. "I'm not here to answer questions as 'foolish as that one.'"

Relating the story of how he took the documents, Brown also said that James Maher, postoffice stenographer, had told him: "I said what you put in my mouth. I want to tell that other copies of missing letters were at the postoffice department, but they wouldn't let me."

Maher previously had testified that he handed papers at the direction of Brown, shortly after the latter left office, which contained official data on ocean and air-mail matters.

Black said he "probably would call Maher a liar," but he said he "did not intend to testify about these remarks Brown says he made."

Led by the friendly questioning of Senator Austin, republican, Vermont, Brown intimated that the atmosphere about the postmaster-general's office was not particularly warm toward the investigating committee headed by Senator Black, democrat, Alabama.

In Brown's testimony he said he told Farley after the latter expressed a lack of sympathy with "political investigations" that "I thought you were too good a sportsman to hit below the belt just because a man happened to be a member of an opposite political party."

"I never hit anybody below the belt," he said.

PEARSON REVIEWS NEW DEAL ISSUES

Washington Author and Columnist Addresses Press Institute.

By HUNT CLEMENT JR., Staff Correspondent.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 23.—Drew Pearson, co-author with Robert S. Allen of two books revealing political Washington, and co-author with Allen of a widely syndicated newspaper column from the national capital, told the Georgia Press Association here today that the dominating issue confronting the new deal is the conflict between recovery and reconstruction.

President Roosevelt, Pearson said, "has followed the almost invariable policy of siding with the reconstructionists."

A guest of the Atlanta Journal, and introduced by O. B. Keeler, of that paper, Mr. Pearson gave the editors and their friends an illuminating picture of the Washington scene, the personalities of the men and women in key positions and a finely drawn exposition of the philosophy of government which they have developed.

The foreign policy of Hoover and Roosevelt toward the far east "is not in principle," he said, "but in method. Hoover sent note after note to Japan. Roosevelt recognized Russia and built up the navy. Already the war party in Japan is saying it would be futile to fight the United States."

Mr. Pearson was honored at luncheon by the Journal, where he met many Georgians personally. He planned to remain in the city overnight in order to attend some of the sessions of the seventh annual press institute and visit with Marlen E. Pew, editor of Editor and Publisher, who will address the institute tomorrow as the guest of the Atlanta Constitution.

Luncheon to Pew. Major Clark Howell Jr., president and general manager of The Constitution, will introduce Mr. Pew and entertain him and the editors at lunch.

Mr. Pearson emphasized the point that following the London economic conference, Roosevelt had turned his back almost completely upon Europe. American foreign policy now aims to cultivate two areas, Latin America, from which Mr. Hull has just returned on a good-will mission, and soviet Russia with which the United States has just resumed diplomatic relations. Mr. Pearson predicted that

President's Son Is Firm In Child Labor Stand

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Even Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has proved unable to convince her son that his views on the child labor constitutional amendment are wrong.

He recently made a speech against the amendment, which would prohibit child labor. His mother wrote him a letter about it.

Today the eldest son of the president came to the White House from Boston for a brief visit and talked to his mother in person.

Smiling in response to inquiries, he conceded that he and his mother "had a very nice discussion about it."

He indicated, however, that his views were unchanged.

Whitney Defends Fight on Control

'Change Head Says Bill Would Control All U. S. Industry, Finance.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—In one of the few interviews he has ever granted, Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, said tonight that the right of free discussion of public questions has gone, and the constitutional right of free speech no longer exists in this country, if recent charges of propagandizing hurled at him were sustained by public opinion.

The charges were made by members of the senate banking and currency committee. Whitney said they were occasioned by letters addressed by him to heads of corporations whose securities were listed on the New York Stock Exchange, calling their attention to the provisions of the pending securities bill which directly affected them and their securities.

"I think the charge is unfounded," said Whitney. "I summarized the provisions of the bill and asked the presidents of corporations having stock prices likewise rose, but the increase in the security market was as nothing."

NAZIS GATHERING ON AUSTRIAN LINE

Dollfuss Concentrates Army, Police and Heimwehr as Defense.

VIENNA, Feb. 23.—(UP)—The government was informed at 9 o'clock tonight through heimwehr (home guard) intelligence service that approximately 10,000 troops in the so-called nazi Austrian legion of Bavaria, heavily armed, were concentrating on the German-Austrian frontier.

The report alleged they were preparing to march on Austria and seize the government. It was feared the attack might occur before the "ultimatum" given by Theo Habicht, German leader of the nazi movement in Austria, expires on February 28. He warned the Dollfuss regime to bow to the nazi or trouble would ensue.

As a counter move, Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss ordered concentration of the Austrian army, gendarmes and heimwehr throughout the country.

The war-like measures provided that these combined forces would be prepared not later than noon tomorrow to rush by motor truck to Braunau, birthplace of Chancellor Adolf Hitler, of Germany, nazi founder.

Favorable developments were hoped for, but the government was determined not to be caught napping in case of a nazi uprising.

The military units moved westward out of Vienna today, it was learned, presumably bent on concentrating in the region of Braunau, where the threatened nazi putsch is expected to strike. The cabinet was believed to have made the concentrations decision late this evening, although no communication on it was issued.

A decree was issued, removing socialists from powerful labor councils in industries and businesses throughout Austria.

Cotton Clothing Prices Defended by Davis

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, answered labor's complaint against increased prices of cotton clothing today with the claim that the larger part of the increase went to labor itself.

Man, 31, Cut to Death In Fight Over Whisky

Roy Whitfield, of Moore's Mill road, was being held at the Fulton tower Saturday morning on a charge of murder in connection with the fatal stabbing of Clarence Dewey Echols, 31, at his home on Howell Mill road early Friday night in a fight over a pint of whisky.

Whitfield surrendered to county officers at the jail shortly after midnight Friday and is held without bond.

Echols, his throat cut from ear to ear, was taken to Grady hospital by his brother, E. D. Echols, but was dead on arrival. It was at first thought he had killed himself, it was said. Whitfield admitted the cutting but said he did not know Echols was badly hurt until he read of his death in The Constitution. J. C. Coyle, address not known, who was with Whitfield, is being sought by county police for questioning.

Echols was cut about the leg and arms and his jugular vein was severed. The body was taken to the Awtry & Lowndes funeral home where burial arrangements will be made. Echols is survived by his wife; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Echols; two sons, Clarence and Harold Echols; two daughters, Ethel and Nora Nell Echols, and four brothers, E. D., E. O., W. B. and E. L. Echols, and one sister, Mrs. W. C. Boyd.

ROBBERIES OCCUR AS OFFICERS GRILL 3 HELD AS BANDITS

Newest Crop of Holdups Take Place at Heavily-Traveled Intersections; Fifth Victim "Steps on Gas," Throws Bandit Off.

3 MEN IDENTIFIED IN 'SNATCH RACKET'

Trio Held After Alleged Attempt to Rob Atlanta Autoists on Macon Highway; Drivers Warned.

Openly flouting the police in their efforts to break up the fast-spreading "snatch" abduction bandits Friday night took four more victims for "rides" and were thwarted in another case when an autoist held a lone robber's attempt to board his car. The new robberies came as city detectives were grilling three men who earlier in the day had been identified in two abduction holdups.

For the first time since the "snatch" racket began here in full force two weeks ago, hold bandits Friday night swooped down on a car occupied by two men. Hereafter the abductors have confided to men who were driving alone.

Berry Rittenbaum, of 882 Washington street, reported that as he drove along Washington street at Woodward avenue with H. A. Wilensky, 500 Pulam street, as a passenger, three men with drawn pistols leaped into the car and drove to Candler street in Hapeville. There they robbed Rittenbaum of $45 and his car and Wilensky of $6.10.

The trio called police from the offices of Eastern Air Transport and detectives were sent to the scene, which is city property. Rittenbaum said one of the bandits had a deep scar on his cheek.

W. H. Jennings, 35, of 1130 Piedmont avenue, N. E., reported that as he waited for a red traffic light at Murphy avenue and Glenn street, two white men boarded his car and forced him to turn into a side street and stop under a nearby awning. After taking $5 in $1 bills, the men, Jennings said, examined his bill folder and after finding it empty, one struck him in the face with his fist.

Jack Mall, salesman for the C. E. Freeman Auto Company, 254 Ivy street, reported to Fulton county police that he was driving a Buick when a white man boarded his car and forced him to turn into a side street and stop under a nearby awning. After taking $5 in $1 bills, the men, Jennings said, examined his bill folder and after finding it empty, one struck him in the face with his fist.

Three Prisoners Identified. The arrest of the three suspects, brought about largely through the efforts of John J. Woodside, Atlanta assistant chief of police, came after they were reported attempting to stop a party of Atlantans on the Macon highway Friday morning. They were positively identified as participants in two of the recent series of auto abductions and robberies which have victimized more than a dozen motorists in and near Atlanta in the last two weeks.

Assistant Chief of Police A. Lamar Poole and detectives expressed belief that "while we may have one of several gangsters, there are at least two more gangsters prowling the city's streets, and Atlantans should not relax their caution in driving about the city's streets."

The three men held at the police station.

Leopold Hailed by Populace As He Claims Belgian Crown

BRUSSELS, Feb. 23.—(AP)—The reign of Leopold III was launched today with a demonstration of popular enthusiasm generally regarded as auguring well for the future.

In an impressive ceremony before parliament and visiting notables this morning Leopold swore himself in as monarch and gave the traditional speech from the throne.

He stood on the spot where the late Albert I, his father, 20 years ago made the declaration, "A nation that defends itself never dies."

Leopold echoed his father's words, saying that he, too, was ready to lead an army in any war for the defense of his people and country.

The decisive shouts of two communists marred the ceremony, but even the staunchest royalists believed the popular reaction was all that could be desired.

Communists, however, planned a demonstration for tomorrow night, a demonstration for tonight, as originally planned. Peace officers said they did not expect the gathering to be more than a passing incident.

He made his first appearance on the stage at the age of 16 in the role of Luke Bloomfield, in "Dora," in a company made up entirely of members of his own family. In 1891 he organized his own repertoire company and played throughout the middle west. Four years later he took his company east and became lessee and manager of Corse Payton's theater in Brooklyn. He went to a hospital last December as a charity patient.

IRELAND MAY BAR BLUE SHIRT UNIFORM. DUBLIN, Feb. 23. (AP)—The government has introduced a bill in the Dail Eireann, parliament of the Irish Free State, prohibiting the wearing of blue shirts of any emblem signifying force other than the uniforms of the national army or national volunteers.

noon when hearings on the bill began and it is their avowed intention to answer his contention that the exchange is capable of regulating itself with specific references to the practices their investigation has brought out. Harris, 36, one of the youngest members of the exchange, gave crisp answers to Pecora's questions on the nature of the activities of his committee, agreeing with the attorney that the constitution of the exchange stipulated that they were "to keep the public correctly informed concerning matters of public interest, having to do with the exchange." When the witness was subpoenaed it was said the intention was to show activities of the exchange which Chairman Fletcher had called a nationwide "propaganda campaign" to defeat the bill. Nothing of this nature was developed today. Harris recalled for Monday.

Famphlet Distributed. Harris testified the activities of the committee consisted principally in the distribution from time to time of pamphlets and literature on the exchange to a "usual mailing list, primarily educational institutions." In two years, he said, 2,510,000 copies of 18 such pamphlets were sent out. "Pecora brought up the subject of Meeker's book, Harris said it was written on Meeker's own initiative and that the exchange purchased 1,500 copies which were sent to exchange officers, libraries, college faculties and 500 to public officials."

"What public officials?" Pecora asked. "A large number were members of congress." "This was done on the initiative of the stock exchange?" "I believe so." "This was done at a time when short selling was the subject of much public controversy?" "The general subject was the subject of considerable agitation in the press."

"Was it because of that that the stock exchange had Mr. Meeker write this book?" "Mr. Meeker wrote this book on his own time."

"The sentiments of the book were approved by the stock exchange?" "The exchange naturally thought it was a fine article on short selling and set it forth clearly and adequately." Table. The table made public by the committee showing the companies, number of loans for the year, aggregate amount for the year and greatest total each had out on any one day follows:

New Cancer Clinic Approved By Georgia Baptist Board

A new cancer clinic for pay patients will begin operation in Atlanta soon, it was announced Friday night following a meeting of the hospital committee of the Georgia Baptist convention, which voted to establish the Atlanta cancer clinic at the Georgia Baptist hospital. The approval of the board came after the staff in a meeting Tuesday voted for establishment of the pay clinic.

Following the vote of the group, a special committee was appointed to perfect details and to put the clinic into operation. It will be organized and operated to meet all requirements of the American Medical Association, the American College of Surgeons and the Fulton County Medical Society. W. D. Barker, superintendent of Georgia Baptist hospital, declared. Officers of the clinic were elected as follows: Dr. J. L. Campbell, director; Dr. T. C. Dawson, president; Dr. James J. Clark, first vice president; Dr. Marion Benson, second vice president, and Dr. Howard Hailey, secretary. The officers will serve for one year and a full clinic staff will be announced later, along with the date when the clinic will begin operation. Though there is a cancer clinic at Grady hospital, Mr. Barker pointed out that the establishment of the new institution will mark the first pay cancer clinic ever to be operated here.

4 MORE ATLANTANS TAKEN FOR RIDES

station gave their names as J. A. Norton, 22, of 625 Capitol avenue; B. E. O'Brien, 35, of 909 North Avenue, and K. B. Hilton, 21, of 273 Whitehall.

Identified by Two. Taken to the police station following their arrest at Georgia avenue and Washington street, O'Brien and Norton were identified at once by Superintendent of Police E. H. Johnson as the two men who were in his automobile several days ago and robbed him of the car and some cash after carrying him out Brown's Mill road.

O'Brien and Hilton, late in the afternoon, also were identified by V. A. Lambert, of 556 Robinson avenue, as the two bandits who abducted and robbed him several days ago, police announced.

Arrest of the three climaxed three brushes with officers after an attempt was made to stop Berry and Sol Cohen, Atlanta bicycle dealers, and J. O. Roberts on the Macon highway at Lovejoy as the Cohen party was returning from Florida early Friday morning.

Attorney B. J. Dantone, who was retained by the trio, filed petitions before Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton superior court seeking their release on writs of habeas corpus and Judge Humphries set the hearings for 9:30 o'clock this morning.

Liquor, Alcohol Seized. Detectives Friday afternoon raided what they said they believed to be another of O'Brien's address and found at 483 Parkway drive 10 cases of liquor, five gallons of grain alcohol, labels and bottles, police said.

Lineups were held at the police station several times during the day in an effort to locate other victims of the abduction bandits identify the men, but without success.

Among those who viewed the three men in Friday's lineup without being able to identify them were Arthur W. Powell, attorney who was kidnapped for ransom; O. H. Bradbury, theater man whose car was wrecked after being boarded by; Wolfe Friedman, C. D. Waddell and other recent victims of abduction bandits.

Mrs. Dodge Sought. Police were seeking to arrange a lineup in which Mrs. Stanley Dodge, wife of a tourist camp operator who

"For some time," said Mr. Barker, "the Georgia Baptist hospital has operated a cancer department and in the past two years has treated more than 400 cases. The new clinic will be enlarged as to facilities from time to time and will have its own staff."

Mr. Barker said the clinic will have 370 milligrams of radium element which amount is equivalent in daily activity to that amount of radium emanation—gas. He also stated that the clinic will have modern deep X-ray therapy equipment which was recently installed.

What effect the move to establish the new pay cancer clinic will have on an ordinance now pending before Atlanta city council to enlarge the Steiner ward for pay patients is not known. The pending ordinance provides that the hospital own and operate the property which the Steiner clinic stands, would turn over the land to the Steiner trustees to form a private corporation to be financed with $250,000 as a loan from the federal government. The city would then pay a per diem to the hospital for charity patients.

In view of the fact that the new Atlanta cancer clinic would probably become competitive for pay patients, there was some speculation as to the procedure on the proposal for a pay cancer clinic at Steiner.

was fatally shot Monday night in a gun duel with bandits on the Jonesboro road, and Sam Samples, 17, an employee of Dodge, view the three men in an effort to link them with the Dodge Robbery and shooting.

Dodge died at Grady hospital Wednesday night. The bandits got by his wife when the attention of the bandits was distracted, he opened fire from behind the counter of his store, and was shot down. The bandits got $40, but one of them dropped a gun in leaving. Mrs. Dodge was said to be in Iowa for her husband's funeral, and detectives were seeking to have her return and view the suspects.

During the morning the three men were fingerprinted and photographed by the police identification bureau. While he was being measured by the identification bureau, O'Brien talked freely with officers and spectators, and asked: "How could anybody recognize anyone else in a car going 70 miles an hour when they were going 50 miles an hour, and at night?" O'Brien claimed that he and his two companions pulled in at the side of the road at the reformatory to take a drink, when they were found by Hapeville police.

Car Put on Speed. Berry Cohen said that when it became apparent that occupants of the car were attempting to stop his machine, his party put on the speed in an effort to outdistance the state car.

"They pulled out of a side road and threw a light on us at Lovejoy, pretending to be speed cops, but I knew

Bill Asks Ban on Visas For Defaulters' Citizens

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. (AP)—A new proposal for hitting at war debt defaulters was made today by Representative McFadden, republican, Philadelphia.

It introduced a bill to prevent the issuance of visas to immigrants from countries in default on their government debts to the United States or any of its citizens.

Monthly lists of the debt standings would be published for use as the basis for determining whether immigrants could come in.

The question of putting immigration from Mexico on a quota basis was revived in a measure by Representative Schacter, democrat, Indiana. He proposed a monthly quota of 1,500 of only those eligible to citizenship.

That Lovejoy has no speed cops," Cohen said. "We put on some speed, and got up to 65 miles an hour."

"They had a faster car, though, and passed us," Cohen said. "When they stopped and forced us to slow down, I opened the door of our car and, trying to make my voice as hard as I could, I yelled at them, 'What do you want us to stop?'"

They saw that there were three of us in the car, and they went on. They soon made another attempt to stop us, and we drove into a filling station. As we stopped, Sol dashed into the filling station to ask for a shotgun, and I ran around to the back of the car and got out my grip. I took my gun out of the grip, and when the strangers saw the gun they went away in a hurry."

Chased Into Hapeville. "We called Hapeville and had the officers here look out for them. As we drove up to where the Hapeville officers were parked by the other car, the three fellows made a sudden dash in their car and got away, although we chased them into Hapeville."

After escaping from the Hapeville officers, the car was picked up and taken to West End by Radio Patrolmen Preston and Wall, who lost it after several blocks. Patrolman Wall, who obtained the license number of the machine, called it into headquarters, and the number was broadcast to all radio cars. Patrolmen C. P. Hill and M. M. Johnson found the machine at Georgia avenue and Washington street with Hilton and O'Brien in it. The third man, who had gone for a supply of gasoline, drove up a few minutes later in a taxicab and was taken to the station.

Hilton, Former Convict. Hilton, detectives said, has been in trouble before. They recalled that he was given two 12 months' sentences for automobile thefts and burglary about five years ago when he was 16 years old, and was placed on probation after serving two months. Detectives had been looking for Hilton for several days on information linking him with the investigation, it was said.

Police said that they found in the car two automatic pistols, a revolver, a blackjack, a pair of smoked glasses and two Michigan license plates. Solicitor-General John A. Boykin's office began an investigation of the case, while County Platoon Patrolmen John T. Carter and J. O. Smith following developments.

With the recovery Friday of the car stolen from C. D. Waddell, an abduction-robbery victim, police said that all cars stolen from the victims of bandit "rides" had been recovered. None of the cars was kept long after the holdup. It was said, Waddell's car was found on Forsyth street with a traffic ticket for overtime parking on it.

Transient Criminals Blamed. Chief of Police T. O. Surdiant Friday said that a part of the crime wave faced by the department, 22 men short, "is because gangsters and criminals driven from hangouts in the north are seeking new fields, drift through Atlanta on their way south to prey on winter tourists. Southern criminals likewise use Atlanta as a convenient stopover on their way north. We intend to stop their activities here at any cost."

Chief Surdiant reiterated his advice to motorists to "shoot to kill" if strangers jump on the running board of their cars. "A man has no more right to jump on the running board of your car at a traffic light than he has to break into your house and if you don't recognize him as a friend, shoot him just as you would if he tried to enter your bedroom," he said. "The police department is doing its best, though short-handed. The time has come for the public to help out by the judicious use of arms. Shoot the bandits and ask questions later."

Man Held Up in Alley. Warren Pair, 23, of 444 Formwalt street, reported that while walking in an alley between Ira and Richardson streets, he was held up by a negro armed with a gun and was robbed of his pocketbook and $8.

Search for two men wanted in connection with the $9,156 robbery of three Syrian brothers, Mike, H. and James Deraney, Friday shifted to Nashville, Tenn., on receipt of a telegram from Chief of Police Elkins Lewis of that city, who asked for details of the robbery and a description of the men.

Police Friday were investigating a report by J. C. McCurdy, of 136 Holliday street, that two policemen refused to arrest three men who attempted to hold him up at Luckie and Fairlie streets. McCurdy said that while he was driving with three companions the men jumped on the running board of his car and attacked him. The officers drove up and when McCurdy hailed them and was seeking to have them arrested, they threatened to harm him and his companions, McCurdy said.

Burglars entered the offices of the Carroll Furniture Company, at 151 Whitehall street, but failed in an effort to open the safe, according to a report to police.

Detective Work Needed. "If every policeman considered himself a detective and really worked on these cases such crimes in Atlanta would soon be eliminated," Mayor James L. Key asserted Friday night on being informed of the four new abductions.

"The police department is doing fine work now and we commend them," the mayor said. "But if the patrolmen all worked on the cases like detectives, robberies would be eradicated. He said he was satisfied the police department was doing all in its power to end the wave of banditry."

In all of the abduction holdups cases reported, except those which occurred Friday, victims' cars have been returned to them.

'Invisible Power' Suspected In Murder of French Judge

PARIS, Feb. 23. (AP)—A dread "invisible power" that cast an air of terror over the strange killing of Judge Albert Prince challenged Premier Doumergue's personal efforts to unravel the deepening mystery of the Stavisky swindling case, of which Prince was said to have "known too much."

Spurred by an unprecedented government offer of 100,000 francs (about $8,500) reward, investigators pushed an inquiry into the magistrate's death, which they frankly admitted was deadlocked in a maze of fantastic theories.

The prime minister ordered the capture, dead or alive, of Prince's slayer. His sudden intervention in the affair gave it an added gravity, while Interior Minister Sarraute was credited with accepting the idea of some hidden force seeking to terrorize witnesses in the $40,000,000 pawnshop machinations of the late Serge Stavisky.

Judge Prince's bound and mutilated body was found on a railroad track near Dijon Wednesday. A bloody knife lay near it. His briefcase had been looted of papers he was using in testifying at an investigation of the financial scandal.

Police at first said he had been lured from Paris by a fake telegram saying his mother lay ill in Dijon and that he had been set upon in a train compartment, his body later being thrown from the train.

Barred as to the real cause of death, however, scientists today sought traces of poison in the vital organs. Prince's closest friends, including Judge Dreyfus, head of the court of appeals, scoffed at suicide theories.

"Handsome Alex" Stavisky—friend of statesmen—was found dead by police in the Chamonix hideaway. The police parliament and the press generally accepted the theory that a "band of terror" or a "mafia gang" was striving to silence witnesses and struck Prince down first.

Many asked, "Who next?" Raymond Prince, son of the judge, expressed the conviction that his father's death was a political crime. "I fear the assassins will never be known," he declared, "for they were only the instruments of powerful high-ups."

The son added he would do all he could to avenge the slaying, "even if it costs my life."

Doumergue, meanwhile, demanded the conviction of all officials connected with Stavisky and judicial and police reforms.

BREACH ON BUDGET FAR FROM HEALED

School Board Head Says
Milam's Conciliatory Efforts
Non-Productive.

Modulated condition of the city's fiscal affairs Friday afternoon appeared to be further from a solution than when the finance committee first began work on the 1934 budget.

J. Ira Harrelson, president of the Atlanta board of education, appropriations to which has caused a deadlock in council and which precipitated passage of an ordinance budget over the veto of Mayor James L. Key, admitted during the afternoon that conciliatory efforts of Councilman Aubrey Milam, chairman of council's school committee, had been non-productive to date.

In answer to questions concerning a luncheon meeting of the board Thursday when Milam was the host, Harrelson said the board took the position that it should not act hastily in preparation of a budget, adding that "15,000,000 Americans were out of jobs much longer than Atlanta school teachers have been without pay and they got along somehow."

School teachers have not had a pay day since January 15 because the board has not adopted a budget, and Milam was attempting to reconcile differences and obtain passage of a budget to pave the way for paying school teachers and other school department employees.

Harrelson was said to have thrown the wrench into Milam's plan at the luncheon meeting when he told the board there was no hurry to make a budget, that the board could not capitulate to "Mayor Key and his gang" and that if the board did adopt a budget in line with Key's demands it would be a slap in the face of our friends in council who have stood staunchly behind us.

Milam was ill at his home Friday and had no comment to make on the school situation.

It was said Friday that the school department cut only about 76 from its pay rolls in its economy survey, while other city departments slashed more than 400; that of the 76 cut by the schools about 50 were from the maintenance department, showing a saving of only about 26 school teachers or those in the instructional division.

The finance committee has been unable to agree on any program for submission to Monday's council session, and there appeared little likelihood Friday that a solution of the financial affairs of the city will be found at Monday's session.

Return of Mail Flying To Air Concerns Urged

Prompt return of air mail to commercial carriers was urged Friday by officials of Atlanta and the mayors of neighboring municipalities. Mayor James L. Key was petitioned to present the matter to President Roosevelt in person, said telegrams urging action were addressed to the president, the Georgia senators and Congressmen Robert Ranspach.

Councilman Joseph E. Berman, vice chairman of the aviation committee of council, presided at the meeting. Among the speakers, who asked immediate action in the interest of 250 men who will be without jobs if commercial aviation in this territory loses the air mail, were:

William R. Hartsfield, Fulton county representative and chairman of Atlanta's first aviation committee; Mayor E. D. Barrett, of College Park; Mayor Quincy O. Arnold, Hapeville; Mayor Howard L. Carmichael, East Point; Jack H. Gray, manager of Candler field, and Currier J. C. Woodward, superintendent of the Georgia Military Academy.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Leroy Deford, 41-year-old dress salesman, of Flushing, Long Island, N. Y., died today from injuries sustained when he apparently fell from a third-story hotel window here.

He left a lengthy letter addressed to his wife, Mrs. L. R. Deford (4108 Parsons boulevard, Flushing), saying:

"Well, Luella, I've finally come to myself. It has been a tough battle, but I have won. I'm coming home. The letter ended with the statement:

"... Feel terribly sick... want to open window and get some fresh air."

Kennedy 'Mail Order' Grad, Country Doctor Testifies

Witness Takes Issue With Medical Experts on Belief That Mercury Caused Death.

GREENWOOD, Miss., Feb. 23.—(AP)—A physician who described himself as "just a country doctor" today took issue with the state's medical experts who testified in the murder trial of Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean that they believed Dr. John Preston Kennedy died last August of mercurial poisoning.

Dr. Dean, charged with having given Kennedy, her admirer, a poisoned whisky highball, smiled with the rest of the courtroom as Dr. John Martin, of Pope, Miss., appearing for the defense, said he was a country doctor and spoke lightly in a slow, easy drawl of leading Greenwood physicians who had appeared for the state.

Of one of the state's star witnesses he said, "I never heard of him until I saw his name in the newspaper," and of another, "I figured he was just another country doctor like the rest of us."

Testifying to Dr. Kennedy's "drinking habits," Dr. Martin said he and the dead surgeon were school mates, adding:

"But he didn't graduate from the Memphis Medical school we attended together. He received a mail order diploma from an Illinois institution."

Dr. Martin was used by the defense to support its contention that Kennedy was a "drinking man" and that he had frequently been ill prior to his strange fatal illness of last summer.

After Dr. Martin had scoffed at much of the state's medical testimony, Special Prosecutor Fred Witte started his cross-examination with a broad hint that Martin was a "small town doctor."

"I want to correct that," interrupted the witness. "I'm just a country doctor. Greenwood is a small town. Pope, where I live, is a country town. And my former place of residence, Shufford, is just a cross roads location."

"Do you know Dr. W. B. Dickens, of Greenwood?" asked Witte, naming one of the state's leading witnesses.

"I'd heard of him, but hadn't particularly regarded him as famous. I figured he was just another country doctor like the rest of us."

"Do you know Dr. George Baskerville, of Greenwood?" Witte said, referring to another state witness and Kennedy's closest friend.

"I never heard of him until I saw his name in the newspaper," returned Dr. Martin.

Although a state objection prevented his testifying about "drinking at school," Dr. Martin said he had seen Kennedy drunk in recent years and that "on one occasion, I suspected him of taking a narcotic to steady himself because of the liquor."

The witness scoffed at the state testimony that Kennedy, dying and hiding his fatal illness from his patients, left his sickroom and performed an operation on a friend before collapsing.

"Anyone as sick and nauseated as Kennedy was described could not have gone to a hospital and even attempted to perform an operation," he said.

In answer to the state claim that a minute trace of mercury was found in Kennedy's stomach after death, Dr. Martin said "more than a minute amount would have been found in the post-mortem if Kennedy had had enough to cause death."

He said he also could not believe that Kennedy, in the condition described by the state, was capable of making a rational statement at the time he was alleged to have charged Dr. Dean in a driving statement with having poisoned him.

Noting that one of Kennedy's physicians had testified for the defense that Kennedy's symptoms were those of acute nephritis, Dr. Martin said:

"The use of whisky and recurring attacks of malaria could produce kidney trouble and subsequently lead to nephritis."

Could Not Be Rational. Dr. W. R. Wallace, of Memphis, physician and head of a private mental and nervous disease hospital, testified next for the defense.

Basing his opinion on Kennedy's symptoms and treatment, Dr. Wallace said he did not believe the patient could have been rational or have made a rational statement on his deathbed.

Answering another question, Wallace said:

"Many times crazy or insane people say or do normal things, yet are abnormal mentally."

"In my opinion, a man couldn't make a rational statement in the condition he (Kennedy) was."

Both Dr. Dean and Kennedy brought a patient to Wallace's institution within recent years, he testified.

Cross-examined by the state, Wallace said he presumed the symptoms described in the defense question were true and correct.

"How much money are you going to get for testifying here?" Jordan asked.

"Not one cent," Wallace said and smiled.

"Are you related to Dick Denman?"

Wallace smiled again.

"We happen to have married sisters," he said.

A moment later he said he didn't intend to "tell a lie for him (Denman) or anyone else."

Spectators applauded noisily and the judge rapped for order.

Roosevelt Approves
40 Million Crop Loan

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today signed the $40,000,000 crop production loan bill with the declaration that it should be the last of this kind.

"This 1934 loan by the government should be considered as a tapering off loan and should be the last of its kind," the president said.

It also developed that the president has called a conference of his principal aides for Monday to map out a foreign trade program, including a bill to give the executive authority to bargain on tariffs with the other powers.

TWO DEAD, ONE DYING
IN ARKANSAS SHOOTING

FORT SMITH, Ark., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Two persons were dead and a third not expected to recover as the result of a shooting in the office of a local lumber company here this morning.

The two killed were Jim Center and his wife, Edna Center, who were believed by officers to have been shot by Jack Hill, official of the company.

Hill also shot himself through the mouth, and is not expected to recover.

Authorities said they believed the killings were the result of an argument over a bill.

SUIT AGAINST CAMP, TALMADGE DISMISSED

$25,000 Action Thrown Out by Humphries for Lack of Jurisdiction.

Judge John D. Humphries in Fulton superior court Friday dismissed for lack of jurisdiction Deputy Sheriff S. C. Wooten's suit for damages in which he asked $25,000 each from Governor Eugene Talmadge and Adjutant General Lindley W. Camp.

The suit grew out of Wooten's arrest by General Camp on Governor Talmadge's order last June when the state capitol and its environs were under martial law, the arrest coming when the deputy tried to serve the governor with a paper notifying him of a court action brought by officials of the highway department who were ousted in the governor's martial law proclamation.

Judge Humphries ruled that he didn't think the governor and the adjutant general could be sued on the matter of an official act but threw out the case on the ground that if they can be sued the actions must be filed against the chief executive in his home county of Telfair and General Camp must be sued in his home county of Cobb.

The governor and General Camp were the only witnesses. Governor Talmadge testified that he still maintained his residence in Telfair county and that he voted there and paid his taxes there. General Camp said he was a resident of Cobb county, voted in that county and paid his taxes in that county.

John I. Kelley, counsel for Deputy Sheriff Wooten, said the case may be appealed to the supreme court. Mr. Kelley argued at length before Judge Humphries made his decision, but there was no argument in support of the defendants' petition filed by Samuel D. Hewlett, John Dennis and Reuben A. Garland.

State Rate Body Asks Johnson Bill Support

The Georgia public service commission has officially called upon the state's delegation in congress to support the Johnson bill which would eliminate federal court jurisdiction from purely state cases, Chairman Jud P. Wilhoit announced Friday.

President Roosevelt has publicly proclaimed support of the measure and it has been lauded by Governor Eugene Talmadge.

Mr. Wilhoit said that the commission had sent telegrams to Senator Walter F. George and Richard B. Russell Jr. and the state's 10 congressmen urging them to vote for the measure.

Meanwhile Assistant Attorneys General John T. Gore and Julian J. E. Anderson, representing the commission, left for New Orleans, where they will appear in behalf of the state fighting an injunction application of the Cairo and Statesboro telephone companies, which are seeking to halt a rate reduction. The case is one which would be taken out of the federal courts in the event the Johnson bill is enacted.

NEGRO SENTENCED FOR TRADING RUM FOR RELIEF ORDER

John Graves, negro, was brought before Judge Jesse M. Wood in city criminal court Friday on a charge of simple larceny. An Atlanta grocer testified that when he filled some relief orders for Graves the latter stole a pound of coffee not called for on the order.

Graves denied taking the coffee. The relief orders were exhibited to the court.

"I never saw those orders before," the accused told Judge Wood. "I bought four orders but those are not the ones."

The court inquired as to where the orders were purchased. A street corner was named.

"And what did you pay for the orders?" the court inquired.

"A quart of whisky," answered Graves.

"Three months on general principles," said Judge Wood.

DR. JONES TO DISCUSS PIETY AND PATRIOTISM

Dr. M. Ashby Jones will preach Sunday morning at the Central Congregational church on "Piety, Patriotism and Purse." This is to be a study in mixed motives. We often speak of carrying business into religion, and are exhorted to take our religion into business. Does this mean to make a business of religion, or to make a religion of business? Should religion be patriotic, and if so, must each country have its own God?

FLORIDAN KILLED IN DYNAMITE BLAST

BARTOW, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—John Blucher Smith, oiler on a dragline, was killed by an explosion of a quantity of dynamite at Phosmic mine, near here today.

The blast was believed to have been caused by accidental contact between a battery, caps and dynamite he was carrying.

He was the son of Tom Smith, pioneer cattleman of this section.

Reviewed three new pictures Friday. Two more loom ahead for today. Of the three seen Friday all of them good average screen entertainment but none are superlative screen events.

"Beloved," with John Boles and Gloria Stuart, opens its run at the Georgia today, while the Rialto also comes in with a new offering in "The Chief," which is Ed Wynn's first venture on the screen.

Sunday at 6 p. m., with "Broken Dreams" on the screen and "Manhattan Blues" on the stage.

And today witnesses the closing performance of the week at the Atlanta, where a new burlesque, revealing the recently new company at its best, starts with the Monday matinee. It is titled "Runnin' Wild."

"I Am Suzanne." This, at the Fox, proves to be a light and fantastic romance with music. Lillian Harvey, the little European star, approaches nearer in this picture the charm she possessed in "Congress Dances," which was made in Europe, than in any of her previous Hollywood productions.

Gene Raymond, as the hero, does the best he can with a role that is rather difficult to make real, but his love-making seems to meet the approval of all feminine patrons of the house within sigh-bearing range of his seat location.

It is a story of a French revue dancer and the youthful proprietor of a marionette show. He makes a marionette to represent the dancer he adores at a distance and the dancer herself is piqued because he lavishes his attention on the puppet instead of on her.

There is also a greedy and jealous theatrical bookie agent to complicate the plot but it all ends happily as all love stories must and, with some catchy songs and a peppery Paris stage revue to add sparkle, provides pleasantly diverting entertainment in the lighter manner.

"The Cat and the Fiddle." Jeannette MacDonald returns to the screen in this picture, which is now at the Grand. She was always one of the screen's most beautiful women and her voice is still the best in Hollywood among the sopranos.

Ramon Novarro, whose tenor is itself capable of concert platform use, is the hero. Frank Morgan is the rival and Henry Armetta is a Brussels taxi driver. Charles Butterworth plays his usual say role with the perfection he invariably brings.

It is a story of young American musicals in Europe. Ramon and Jeannette inevitably fall in love as students and inevitably marry when she wins success as a popular song composer.

Later, of course, his opera is produced and wins overwhelming success, largely by the singing of Jeannette in the main role in the story. And once again young romance triumphs. The closing scenes are in color and there are at least two shots which, if the projection machine were stopped, would be exact replicas of the scenes they used to project with the illustrated songs of the long ago.

Laurel and Hardy are in a new short, "Oliver the 8th," which is one of the best they have made in months. There is a charming reel about Carrie Jacobs Bond—with "Jes' a Wearyin' for You," sung without a word credit to the lyricist, our own Frank Stanton.

"Good Dame." Fredric March and Sylvia Sydney. At the Paramount. He is a carnival drifter who, all his life, has known only one kind of woman—the "dame." She is a girl who has run away from home to become a chorus girl, is stranded, joins the carnival and is arrested when the town's reform element raids the "girl tent."

Both March and Sydney give characterizations that become thoroughly convincing early in the picture. The story of their struggle together, each fighting the other and the final situation that reveals to him, what she has known for weeks, that he loves her, is well directed. Well acted. And well written.

The final scene in the courtroom when, with jail sentences staring both in the face, they forget their surroundings, forget the judge and all others in the room and proclaim aloud the joyous fact that they are really in love with each other, while far-fetched perhaps in idea, is put over so cleverly by the two principals that it seems altogether natural while you hear it.

There is little doubt you'll like the picture.

Boles in Singing Role In "Beloved" at Georgia

Half a dozen years ago John Boles played the screen's first opera. The popularity established then has kept him in the minds of the public ever since as the screen's sweetest singer. So he sings once again in the first run musical romance, "Beloved," which opens at the Georgia theater today. Gloria Stuart plays opposite Boles in this production. In the picture, he is a composer of symphonies, a man, though he does not possess the spark of genius, has from babyhood been steeped in the very atmosphere of the world's great compositions.

In the picture Boles sings three songs, "My Beloved," "Forget and the favorite, "In the Evening." The picture, as well as the musical score for the completed production, were composed by Victor Schertzinger, well-known musician and composer, who also directed "Beloved."

Amos 'n' Andy, radio's greatest personalities, will arrive in Atlanta next Saturday, for a week's engagement at the Capitol. The theater is planning a special program during the week, which will also include a high-class feature picture and additional stage entertainment.

Ed Wynn at Rialto In His Picture Debut

Ed Wynn, one of the funniest comedians of the stage and the radio, makes his screen debut in "The Chief," the feature attraction which opens a four-day run, including Sunday, at the Rialto theater today. The nationally famous laugh-maker is just as funny on the screen as in either of the mediums in which he is already won top ranking and it is predicted that this will merely be the first of a series of pictures that will make him one of the best box office bets in the film field.

It is a story of the old Bowery, in the gay nineties and its roughneck background, a perfect setting for the bawdy and diffident character that Wynn portrays. There is a surprise finish to the picture that is totally different from the usual screen plot, and ending the picture that sends audiences away talking for days afterwards.

Dorothy Mackall heads the supporting cast which also includes "Chick" Hale, William Boyd, C. Henry Chon, Effie Essler, etc. It was directed by Charles V. Reiser. Newsreel and short subjects complete the program.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman IS MOUNT BERRY GUEST

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, former president of the federal council of Churches of Christ in America and at present radio minister of the federal council, will be the guest of Miss Martha Berry, founder and director of the Berry schools, this week-end, arriving at the schools Saturday morning.

Dr. Cadman is on a lecture tour through the south, coming to Georgia from engagements in Charleston and Charlotte. He goes to Atlanta to speak Sunday afternoon.

OPEN DOOR DEBATED IN WYNEKOOP TRIAL

School Teacher Questioned on Point in Slaying of Chicago Woman.

CRIMINAL COURTS BUILD-ING, CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—(AP)—The question of whether or not the back door of the Wynekoop basement was open when the police arrived to investigate the slaying of Rheta Gardner, Wynekoop played an important part today in the second trial of Dr.
Alvin Karpis, accused of murdering her daughter-in-law.

End Hennessey, prim, middle-aged school teacher, who was a boarder at the Wynekoop home, declared on cross-examination that a policeman had told her the door was open. A previous witness, Police Sergeant Arthur R. March, testified he made a check of the door within a few minutes after his arrival and found it locked.

Public interest in the murder case, which had resulted in a near riot when thousands of women stormed the courtroom in an effort to gain admittance to the first trial, apparently had been again aroused, for seats were at a premium today.

"Did any one tell you the back door was open when the police arrived?" Defense Attorney Milton
Smith asked the school teacher.

"A policeman asked me if I knew the back basement door was open,"
she answered. "I said I did not know it. He said it had been. The matter was mentioned at least twice during the evening."

The defense attorney also brought out in its questioning of Miss Hennessey several other points which they considered important to their case.

They were:

1. That Dr. Wynekoop was in the habit of keeping money in the drawer of her office desk.

2. That it was customary for Dr.
Wynekoop to keep at least one light burning in the house at all times, whether or not there was anyone home. (A messenger boy and a neighbor testified at the first trial that they had seen a light burning in the Wynekoop home at 4 p. m. on November 21, the approximate time of the killing.)

3. That on a night a month or so previous to the tragedy, Miss Hennessey had been awakened by an unusual disturbance somewhere in the building.

(The response came in answer to a question by Smith concerning her knowledge of any robberies in the home prior to the finding of Rheta's body.)

In response to a question by Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty, Miss Hennessey said that there were scales in each of two upstairs bathrooms.
The question was apparently intended as a blow to the defense contention that Rheta had gone to the basement office to weigh herself on a scale there and had been slain by an intruder.

The Bible Needs No Defense, Says Aimee, Here for Debate

Aimee McPherson is shown in her Atlanta hotel suite shortly after her arrival here Friday afternoon. Staff photo.

Sister Aimee Semple McPherson, Four-Square Gospel pastor of Angelus temple, came to Atlanta Friday from Macon to lecture and debate Sunday at the city auditorium.

The story of her life, entitled "From Milkpail to Pulpit," will be given Sunday afternoon, and will be followed Sunday night by a debate with Charles Lee Smith, president and founder of the American Society for the Advancement of Atheism, on the subject,
"Is There a God?" Their series of debates on the Bible against evolution will be concluded in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. McPherson revealed that she is seeking the nation-wide adoption of state laws against the teaching of evolution as a science. She does not object to its being taught as a theory, but believes that when it is taught as a theory the story of Genesis should share a like amount of attention, she said.

Court Raps Fay Webb Vallee, Gives Rudy Writ Protection

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Mrs.
Fay Webb Vallee's California suit for $1,450 a month alimony was called off to its being taught as a theory,
by Supreme Court Justice Bernard L. Shientag today in ruling she could bring action for divorce and maintenance only in New York state.

"The California action seems to have been an afterthought," the judge said, "brought to harass the defendant who he was fulfilling a contract in California and under conditions which plaintiff and her attorneys well knew were very expensive to defend."

"The proceeding seems to have been brought after threats failed to induce defendant voluntarily to relinquish his rights under the separation agreement."

That agreement, signed last April and giving Mrs. Vallee $100 a week, formed the court's basis for granting the orchestra leader a temporary injunction restraining Mrs. Vallee from going ahead with her action in Los Angeles for the alimony, $50,000 counsel fees, and $10,000 expenses.

"It will be noticed that under this agreement," the judge continued,
"plaintiff agreed not to maintain any law suits against the defendant so long as the defendant was not in default."

"It is conceded that the defendant is not in default. Accordingly, the existence of this agreement is a complete plea in bar to the suit for maintenance brought in California
so long as it remains in force."

If Mrs. Vallee does not adhere to Justice Shientag's order and prosecutes the California action, the court held, she will be unable to collect any judgment against Vallee in this state, where he has his assets.

The orchestra leader, on the other hand, was ordered to post a $250 bond to provide damages, if any, which Mrs. Vallee might suffer as a result of the injunction. The latter also prevents her and her attorneys from attaching Vallee's assets.

Vallee was given permission to file an amended answer to Mrs. Vallee's New York suit, in which she requests that the $100 a week agreement be held legal and that she be barred from seeking more money.

"It is apparent," said Justice Shientag, "that since plaintiff claims that she was ill when she signed the agreement, it will be important for the defendant to show if he can, by a sufficient number of witnesses, that she was in good health."

"It will also be important for him to show what his exact financial status was at the time, through accountants, and it will also be necessary for him to establish his own and his attorney's good faith in the transaction."

"The defendant should not be forced to take all those witnesses and documents to California."

FAY SAYS JUSTICE
WILL EVENTUALLY WIN
LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—(AP)— Fay Webb Vallee may be halted temporarily in her court fight for $1-400 monthly temporary alimony from Rudy Vallee but she said tonight she felt confident justice "eventually will prevail" and that the courts will recognize her rights.

"It is significant that Mr. Vallee is using every means to keep from defending my suit in California," the orchestra leader's estranged wife said.
"If he is innocent of the charges he should welcome the opportunity to defend himself in California."

Mrs. Vallee's legal counsel, Ben C.
Cohen, said he did not consider the temporary injunction granted to Vallee in New York to be binding in California.

"Judge Thomas C. Gould, of our superior court, has already ruled that the pendency of the action in New York did not affect the rights of Mrs.
Vallee to proceed in California, and accordingly made his order denying Vallee's motion to have the proceedings suspended, pending the outcome in determination of the action in New York," said Cohen.

"Mr. Vallee, with his vast fortune and the resources at his command, is much better able to litigate this matter in California than Mrs. Vallee could in New York, particularly in her present poor physical condition and her very limited means."

DICING WITH DEATH!

The appalling increase in automobile accidents in the Atlanta area is arousing citizens to action!

CARELESS DRIVING MUST STOP!

There is only one reason why the motor car is ever an instrumentality of death and destruction—there is only one cause for the maiming, crippling and killing of human beings as a result of motor transportation—CARELESSNESS!

Every motor car accident reflects a failure of some kind—and nearly always a human failure.
Every tragic mishap is a blood red blot on the book of community progress. Carelessness is the staunch ally of the Grim Reaper. Thoughtlessness and indifference are first lieutenants. EVERY CARELESS OR INCONSIDERATE DRIVER IS A POTENTIAL SLAYER!

How many times a day do YOU gam-

YOU take chances that might hurl you

Creomulsion is made to give supreme help for coughs or colds. It combines 7 helps in one—the best helps known to science. It is for quick relief,

But careful people, more and more, use it for every cough that starts. No one knows where a cough may lead. No one can tell which factor will do most. That depends on the type of cold.

Creomulsion costs a little more than lesser helps.
But it means the utmost help. And it costs you nothing if it fails to bring the quick relief you seek.
Your druggist guarantees it. Use it for safety's sake.

Georgia and Tennessee Enter Second Round of Tournament

THREE 66'S TIE FOR EARLY LEAD IN TAMPA OPEN

MacFarlane, Turnesa and Runyan Tied on First Day.

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Old Man Par, just a ghost of his former self, surrendered to the spectacular shots of nine professionals here today as the fastest field in the three-year history of the tournament teeled toward the first 18 holes of the $2,000 72-hole Gasparilla open.

While MacFarlane, of Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Paul Runyan, of West Chester, N. Y.; and Joe Turnesa, of Long Island, N. Y., paced the 104 entries with brilliant scores of 66, four strokes under par, MacFarlane and Turnesa, playing together, each put together a 32 and a 34. Runyan, the 1932 winner of the tournament, posted a 36 and a 30.

Close on the heels of the leaders trailed Denny Shute, of Miami, the British open champion and the defending Gasparilla titleholder, and O. W. Beaupre, of Detroit, each with 35-32-67.

Horton Smith, slender Oak Park, Ill., stroke-maker, and Ky Laffoon, of Denver, Colo., tied for third place, each with 36-32-68, while Dick Metz, of Iowa, N. Y., and Mike Turnesa, of Fairview, N. Y., brought up the rear of the par punishing guard. Metz carded 32-37-69 and Turnesa 34-35-69.

LEADS AMATEURS.
Ted Meares, 22-year-old youngster from Davis Islands, Tampa, led the amateurs with a 35-35-70, and grouped with him in a tie for fifth place honors were Frank Walsh, of Chicago, with 37-35-70, and Lloyd Gulickson, of St. Petersburg, Fla., with 34-36-70.

The story of the 66's carried by MacFarlane, Turnesa and Runyan was one of putting—sensational, weird and erratic—on greens slick as glass. The rain of the previous day followed by today's beaming sun made ideal conditions for the assault on par.

MacFarlane, runner-up in the two previous Gasparilla tournaments, was perhaps the steadiest of the trio. He played even par golf through the fourth, ran home a six-foot putt for a birdie three on number 5, sank a 20-footer on number 7 for another birdie three, then brought down a birdie two on number 8 with a 25-footer.

The veteran Scot wobbled for the first time of the round on number 13 where he hooked his tee shot into a ditch. He came out with a beautiful recovery, then calmly ran down a 15-foot putt for a par 3. He finished the day with an eight-foot putt for a birdie four on number 18.

TURNESA'S PUTTER HOT.
Turnesa's putter, however, put MacFarlane's to shame. The Long Islander lost a strike to par on number 1, where he sailed his second over the green. But on number 3 he rammed home an eight-foot putt for a birdie four, on number 4 he sank a 12-footer for a birdie and on number 5 he ran down a 10-footer for a birdie 3. On the par 3 number 2 he dropped his tee shot a foot from the pin.

The big fireworks came on the home nine. Turnesa sank an eight-footer for his fifth birdie of the day on number 11, then blew a 12-inch putt and took a bogie 5 on number 12. He came right back with another eight-foot putt for his sixth birdie on number 13, then missed a four-footer and took a five on number 14. He missed a three-foot putt for another five on number 15, then holed out a 25-foot chip for his seventh birdie on number 16. He wound up the day with an eight-foot putt for his eighth birdie on number 18.

Runyan's putter carved out just as many thrills. He opened fire with three putts and a five on par four number 1. He missed a four-footer on number 2, a two-footer on number 3, and a five-footer on number 5, all for birdies and wound up with a 36, one stroke over par for the nine.

RALLIES.
The West Chester, N. Y., professional, who is one of the biggest money winners of the winter golf season, apparently found his touch on the home nine. He dropped his second two feet from the pin on number 12 and ran down the putt for a birdie 3 on the 13th day. He chipped in 25 feet for a birdie two on number 12, then sank a 15-foot putt for another birdie on number 16. The climax, however, came on the 450-yard number 18 where Runyan hit a beautiful second onto the green, then ran down a 15-footer for an eagle three.

The leaders' cards:

Ball and Sargent Trail Leaders.
TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 23.—Ernie Ball, former assistant professional at the East Lake Country Club and pro at Mobile, Ala., and Al Sargent, professional at the Inverness Club, Toledo, Ohio, were back of the leaders at the conclusion of 18 holes of play in the Gasparilla open here today. They have good chances to get into the running tomorrow.

Ball carded a 75, while Sargent was one better.

BREAK O' DAY!

"In Dixie Land I'll Take My Stand—on Homosassa Fishing"

HOMOSSASSA FISHING CLUB, Fla., Feb. 23.—It is better this way. The fishing is. And I hope that no one will step forward with an argument that the old he-man methods were better. I'll take my fishing in the Homosassa style. It goes like this: At 7 o'clock in the morning James Locklear knocks at the door. James is an alert young man in overalls. But he carries a tray. On it are glasses of orange and grapefruit juice. A few minutes before knocking, James had gone out and pulled the fruit from the trees on the lawn. And squeezed out the juice. All the vitamins are in there. Rampant. At 7:45 there is breakfast and at 8:30 the guides have the boats and bait ready. And down the wide weird river we go. There are palmettos, stately palms and a tropical jungle on either side. Blue herons and startled cranes fly up. And an occasional bald eagle takes wing.

The guide asks what one wants. One may fish for trout, sheepshead, redfish, or any variety of fish. The bait or the lures are ready. And the fishing begins. And they bite. Now and then the fishing isn't so good. When it isn't good it means that only a dozen or so, big red fish will be caught with a comparative number of other kind in the boats that come home.

Today, for instance, there were a number of fine black bass. I have gone fishing, often. And returned home worn, weary and slightly suggestive of mud, old bait and general exasperation. But here one returns refreshed and with nerves calmed. This is enlightened fishing.

The bird-dog people get one up at dawn. The fox-hunting people arise well before dawn. These sports involve much serious and difficult riding. But fishing at Homosassa, that is something else. And the rest is something else, too. The only noise at night is the wild ducks. They awake Arthur Bird. He must look out the window at them. And quack back at them.

AND THAT NOON HOUR SIESTA.
The stop at noon is the high point of the day. Baskets of packed lunch are in each boat. And each guide carries a skillet and a coffee pot. At noon the boats are tied up at some island. And the guides, with remarkable efficiency, soon have fires going. Fish are cleaned. The aroma of coffee fills the air. The lunch is spread. Chairs appear from the boats. The island is suddenly inhabited.

The check comes on the catch of the morning—and what lies. That coffee is worth a paragraph or so. I have just read an article by Mr. Roark Bradford, the eminent novelist of New Orleans, in which Mr. Bradford discusses coffee. He views with scorn the coffee which is boiled in the old-fashioned coffee pot. But on a tropical island, with fresh fish bubbling in the frying pan's fat, it seems to be something slightly better than the nectar which was served on Mount Olympus.

It is strong enough to carry an election. But it soothes. Served at home it may not be coffee. But on an island in the Homosassa river, well, the coffee is something else. Guides call it beach coffee. And I recommend it. That noonday siesta is one of the features of the Homosassa club. It is civilized fishing at its best.

SADIE THOMPSON AND RAIN.
Yesterday we lacked only Sadie Thompson and a phonograph to play the "Wabash Blues" to have the cast of the play, "Rain," which the late Jean Engels made famous. We had a United States marine. And we had the tropical islands and the setting. And we had rain. Gobs of it. It swept the river. But we fished on. It's curious. The fish don't mind a rain. Most of the boats stayed out through the storm. And Mr. and Mrs. Gus Guinn caught the two largest redfish of the day during the downpour. One weighed 12 pounds and the other 11.

The river is a beautiful one. The members here declare it to be the most beautiful in Florida. And I would not argue the point. With the coming of the dark clouds and the rain, it took on another aspect. The jungle of palm, palmetto and marsh at its edges was dark. And the whole thing had a lost world aspect.

It was, anchored out there in a boat with the rain coming down in sheets, as if one were in some spot where man had never been before. The sea gulls flew about us. Their eerie cries were the only sound above the rain. A long-legged blue heron eyed us without moving. Had a prehistoric monster come wading out of the jungle and into the river, your correspondent would have fainted, but not with surprise.

THE CATCHES TODAY.
The catches today were good. Arthur Bird caught the first fish of the day, a nice redfish. And they gave a real fight. Gus Guinn required 30 minutes to land his big one.

Clark Howell Sr. had three big bass to his credit and a dozen small ones, which were tossed back because they were not the legal size. There were several nice catches of trout and bass.

Your correspondent caught the second and third fish of the day and beamed happily until the noon siesta. At that time the club members were polite, but it was obvious that there was something wrong. Investigation revealed that the two fish caught by this reporter were mango snappers. And when one catches a mango snapper one is supposed to bow one's head in shame. It seems that just anybody can catch mango snappers. But they looked swell to me. And what teeth those babies have!

"Be careful," said the guide. "They will jump at you to try and bite you."

And you know who was very, very careful.

ACROSS THE RIVER.
Across the river is the old village of Homosassa. It is a tiny fishing village. And among the most attractive people in Florida are Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Macrae, who own the general merchandise store.

They are Scots. And the burr is still on their tongues. And it is to Mrs. Macrae that everyone turns for information about the old history of this section.

And what a kick it was to go to the postoffice for the afternoon mail at 6 o'clock. There is no train. And so the

COACHES OKAY REE CHANGES

Biff Jones and Frank Thomas See Aid for Offense.

By Jimmy Jones.

What amounts to a rather warm general endorsement of the new changes in the football rules, is expressed by a majority of the delegation of prominent southeastern conference coaches in attendance at the basketball tournament here.

Most of them agree in the belief that the changes will react beneficially to the offense.

Captain Lawrence M. (Biff) Jones, that excellent coach and West Pointer, who was among the distinguished gallery of coaches that watched Georgia Tech's spring practice yesterday, came forward with the first statement.

LIKES THE PASS.
"While I was one of those coaches who wanted the ball moved in 15 yards on sideline plays, instead of the 10, I cannot kick on the changes that were put into effect at the meeting of the rules committee here," he stated.

"I think the lifting of the touch-back penalty on the first pass into the end zone will be of great advantage to scoring plays inside the 20-yard line," Captain Jones added. He also expressed satisfaction with the other two minor changes, particularly that lifting the five-yard penalty on incomplete passes.

"We scored a lot with passes at L. S. U. last year and naturally these changes will help our game," the popular army man continued.

THOMAS SAYS O. K.
Frank Thomas, of Alabama, who also was one of the group that watched the Jackets scrimmage, agreed with Captain Jones on the pass.

"I ought to open up things a great deal for the offense in scoring territory and don't be surprised now to see all the teams developing their pass plays in this zone," Frank declared.

Coach Thomas added that he was looking around for another passer or so himself since this change was put in the rules.

Ted Cox, Tulane's stalwart coach, and Captain A. R. McKee, of Mississippi State, stated that they could find no fault with the changes and considered all of them constructive.

Few of the coaches believed that the change in the kicking rule, allowing a player to hold the ball for a punt without having to drop it, would have much noticeable effect.

A player can kick the ball better holding it himself, anyway," one of them stated.

OTHERS PRESENT.
In addition to Coaches Jones, Thomas, Cox and McKee, the gallery included "Red" Heard, athletic director at L. S. U.; Sam McAllister, of Auburn; "Goat" Hale, of Mississippi State; Major Wells, of Fort Benning, and several others.

All were guests of Coach Alexander, of Tech, who put the Jackets through a lively scrimmage in the crisp weather.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(AP)
President Thomas R. Watkins announced tonight that three members of the Memphis Chicks would be offered for sale or trade.

They were Johnny Berger, catcher; Fern Bell, outfielder, and Lonnie Mock, infielder.

Berger, who came to the Chicks in 1933, from Washington, batted .257 in 1933. Bell, property of the Tribe two years, played part of last season with Beckley in the Mid-Atlantic league. In the Southern association last year he batted .277. Mock was traded to Memphis from the Dixie league last year.

WOODLAND DEFEATS STOCKBRIDGE, 57-21
GRiffin, Ga., Feb. 23.—Palmerston and Woodland advanced to the final round of the fourth district tournament in the 17-year-old boys' basketball.

Buchanan led Woodland to a decisive 57-21 victory over Stockbridge. McCollough and Nantz were best for Stockbridge.

Palmerston won a clean-cut victory over Milner by a 38-20 score. Cooks' shooting and the guarding of James Dobbs were shining spots in Palmerston's attack. Eberhardt made 16 points for Milner and was the outstanding performer of the afternoon.

Palmerston plays Woodland Saturday night for a chance to play the winner of the LaGrange division Monday night.

Patten and Bray were the stars for Colbert, while Miller and Hayes led the quintet from Arnoldville. Union Point was defeated by Evans by a score of 36-22. Norris and Gray were the high-point men for Evans. Newsum and Drane led the score for the losing team.

L. S. U.'s Celebrated Backward Pass Combination

Sparky Wade, who needs no introduction to southern basketball fans, is flipping that famous backward pass to Jack Torrance, giant teammate, in a practice session here yesterday. The L. S. U. team, ranked high among southeastern tournament favorites, play their first game today. The backward pass figures prominent in the offensive. Wade flips the ball to Torrance, who either shoots at the basket or passes to a teammate. Torrance can do as he chooses because he weighs 279 stripped and stands 6 feet 4 inches. PETRELS END GRID SESSIONS

Oglethorpe's spring football practice was ended Friday afternoon with a game between Alternate Captain McNeely's Flashes and Captain Frank McNeely's Aces. McNeely's team won, 17 to 0.

Belton Clark was outstanding for the winners. His punting was a decided advantage and his placement from the 17-yard line gave his mates a field goal and a three-point lead late in the first quarter.

In the second quarter C. Thompson completed a pass in the end zone for a safety and two points, and Cecil Moon completed the scoring with two touchdowns in the final quarter. One of the touchdowns came from a short pass from Clark and a 14-yard sprint. The other resulted from a well-executed tackle play and a 10-yard dash.

Both the Petrel leaders for next year played unusually well, particularly on defense.

Puryear, C. Thompson, T. Thompson, Massie and Reynolds are newcomers to the varsity ranks who played unusually well in the final game and who have drawn the attention of head coaches during spring practice.

Louisiana Five Grows in Favor As Meet Opens

By Jack Troy.

It may have been something else, but what Sparky Wade, L. S. U.'s offensive spark plug, was humming as he left the auditorium with teammates last night, sounded suspiciously like the "Louisiana Hayride."

There is quite a bit of increased sentiment for the bayou basketball. There is an inclination on the part of the fans to rate L. S. U. first, Kentucky second and Alabama third.

The Southeastern conference tournament, making what might be its last stand on the elevated boards at the cavernous auditorium, enjoyed more opening night atmosphere than in some years.

A FINE CROWD.
Maybe it was because Tech and Georgia were to take the floor at 8 o'clock to engage the University of Florida, which, by some strange quirk of fate, happens to be the opening round opponent for the champions for the second successive year.

Tonight's games find Louisiana State, another well-liked contender, playing the surprising Tennessee at 8 o'clock and at 9 o'clock Georgia, with the state society behind her, engages Josh Cody's Vanderbilt team.

The L. S. U.-Tennessee game means the appearance of the inimitable "Sparky" Wade and his mates.

If the Bulldogs can bowl the Commodores over they will be in the semi-finals. And if they go, the financial success of the tournament will receive a big boost.

GOOD CROWD.
A pleasing crowd turned out for the opening games last night, despite the heavy rain. A packed house is anticipated tonight and the match nee games also should draw a large turnout.

Marketed football coaches, including Fielding H. Yost of Michigan, viewed last night's games.

With Alabama's chances dimmed by the loss of Kimbrough, the L. S. U. team may find the position of favorite in the lower bracket. Harry Rabenhorst has every member of his last year's team returned, and it has averaged 42 points a game this season.

STAR BOWLERS MEET TODAY

Atlanta bowlers and bowling fans are in for a treat this afternoon and evening when out-of-town bowling champions compete against outstanding local competition in the southern mixed doubles duckpin championship sweepstakes at Bick's Bowling Center.

Miss Lorraine Gull, No. 1 ranking bowler of the world, is slated to arrive in Atlanta this morning from Washington, D. C., and will be paired with Astor Clarke, United States sweepstakes champion, who arrived in Atlanta Friday afternoon.

Miss Gull holds records in every bowling town in the north, east and south where she has bowled and is still clipping the pins for the high average of the ladies' leagues in Washington, D. C. She has an average of 116.

Clarke is always capable of big games and his splendid performance in the United States meet proves that he is one of the most outstanding bowlers in the game today.

Sue Miller and Hugh Crawley, of Baltimore, Md., will arrive on the train with Miss Gull this morning to compete in the event.

A number of local boys and girls will try for the $100 cash award to be given the winners. No entry fee will be charged, pay only the price of the games bowled. Admission will be absolutely free to spectators.

Bebe Bangert and Walter Lawson, Margaret Glenn, of Atlanta, and Frank Peters, of Baltimore, Md.; Clark Tidwell and Mrs. Tidwell, A. J. Sosson and Mrs. Ewing, Sarah Garner and Sam Robinson, and a number of interested duckpin bowlers will play tomorrow at 2 and 8 o'clock, five games being bowled at each time, with the total pinfall determining the winning pair.

Basketeers Meet At Calvary Court
The Calvary Methodist church court, located on Gordon street, in West End, will be the Mecca for local basketball fans for the next few days as the annual tournament will begin at 6:30 tonight, with the eight girls' teams entrants playing on the first card. Some 14 or more boys' teams have entered and the pairing will be made today with the schedule to be announced later.

The first round of games calls for the following teams to play:
Calvary Methodist vs. Inman Park.
Gordon Street Presbyterian vs. Alpha Class.
Rogers Company vs. Fulton Bag.
Patillo Memorial vs. Druid Hills Methodist.

GRIFFITH PITCHED.

By Jimmy Jones.

Well, you can still buy those two tickets for Georgia tonight and watch them play Vanderbilt.

The young men in the red and black scintillated jauntily across the white pine floor last night at the auditorium to hand their old pals the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets, a 33-19 licking in the opening round of the tournament.

With a team in the second round galloped the tall Tennesseans of Major Britt Britton in their bright orange spangles, who also showed surprising skill in eliminating Auburn in the first game of the night by the decisive score of 43-26.

JOHNSON AGAIN.
Frank Johnson, the stocky sophomore forward who put the skids under the Jackets in the state series, shot nine points and hawked the ball over the court before he went out on four fouls near the end of the game. He was brilliantly aided by Brown Wilder, the guard, who scored a like number and played a superb floor game.

The dash of red and black and the splash of orange dominated the entire color scheme last night. Auburn and Georgia Tech never had a chance. Both were badly behind before the game was 10 minutes old.

The Tennesseans, who are still something of a mystery and maybe one of those "dark horses" that come browsing around the tournaments every once in awhile, were off on the big hop and had run up a 13-0 lead on the boys from the Plains before the latter could get their breath.

With a big boy named Bob Stafford, who is the closest approach to Jack Torrance, of L. S. U., in the super-tall night class, revving as the hub of the pivot, and a slender forward named McPherson firing the ball with a keen-eyed accuracy, the Tennesseans were just about as hard to stop as a prairie fire.

This Stafford, it may be added, weighs 220 pounds, which puts him just 59 short of Jack Torrance's 279.

The happenings last night, as surprising as they were, merely constituted the preamble of what comes today as the seeded big four—Kentucky, L. S. U., Alabama and Vanderbilt—swing into action.

Hank Crisp's big red team from Tuscaloosa, crippled and with chances dimmed by loss of Zeke Kimbrough, cracked forward and high jumper, was left behind in a hospital, and a back injury to Jim Walker, another forward, will open the second round this afternoon, playing Mississippi State, a rather formidable foe, at 3 o'clock.

KENTUCKY IN ACTION.
The roundly favored blue machine of Kentucky takes the floor at 8 o'clock to engage the University of Florida, which, by some strange quirk of fate, happens to be the opening round opponent for the champions for the second successive year.

Tonight's games find Louisiana State, another well-liked contender, playing the surprising Tennessee at 8 o'clock and at 9 o'clock Georgia, with the state society behind her, engages Josh Cody's Vanderbilt team.

The L. S. U.-Tennessee game means the appearance of the inimitable "Sparky" Wade and his mates.

If the Bulldogs can bowl the Commodores over they will be in the semi-finals. And if they go, the financial success of the tournament will receive a big boost.

GOOD CROWD.
A pleasing crowd turned out for the opening games last night, despite the heavy rain. A packed house is anticipated tonight and the match nee games also should draw a large turnout.

Marketed football coaches, including Fielding H. Yost of Michigan, viewed last night's games.

With Alabama's chances dimmed by the loss of Kimbrough, the L. S. U. team may find the position of favorite in the lower bracket. Harry Rabenhorst has every member of his last year's team returned, and it has averaged 42 points a game this season.

Joe Palmisano, Ex-Tech Star, To Be Sold To Cracker Club

ANNOUNCEMENT OF COAST DEAL IS DUE TODAY

Star Portland Player Started Career as a Jacket.

Although official confirmation could not be obtained last night, The Constitution learned that Joe Palmisano, former Georgia Tech baseball star, and now a veteran catcher on the Portland club in the Pacific Coast league, will be sold to the Atlanta Crackers.

The announcement of the purchase can be expected any minute.

Spencer Abbott, new Cracker manager, wanted to bring Palmisano to Atlanta when he resigned as manager of the Portland club, but the owners refused to sell him. He is one of the best catchers in the coast league and a real asset to the Portland club. He is the most colorful catcher in his league. In addition, he is a dangerous hitter.

The Cracker manager is understood to be working on the deal with the Portland club from his home in Washington.

EX-TECH STAR.

Palmisano started his baseball career at Georgia Tech back in the days of Sunshine Thompson, Red Haron, and other famous stars. On leaving school he was signed by the Montgomery club in the old South-eastern league and from there he went to the Mobile club in the Southern association. The Crackers passed him up when he asked for a tryout with them.

Later he became the property of the Philadelphia Athletics where he was understood to Mickey Cochrane for three years. Under Connie Mack, veteran manager, and Cochrane, he gained much of his experience. He was sent to the Portland club in a player deal in 1932. Under Abbott he became one of the greatest catchers on the coast.

Officials of the Atlanta club stated last night that they knew nothing of the deal and, consequently, it could not be learned whether it would be a straight cash deal or players would figure in the transaction.

Anyway, you can look for the announcement any minute.

Crackers Try Out New Pitcher.

Pitcher Joe Maley, a right-handed free agent, last active in the International league, will be given a tryout in the spring by the Atlanta Crackers.

Yesterday, Business Manager Earl Mann received a letter from Manager Spencer Abbott, asking him to send a contract to Maley, now a free agent and living in Chicago.

"He may be able to do us some good," Abbott added.

The Cracker business office also reported receipt of the signed contract of Pitcher Carlos Moore, right-handed, yesterday. Moore came to the Crackers from New Orleans last year.

CLUB UNWARE.

And for the contract of Pitcher Frank Barnes, reported on the way, Earl Mann has agreed to terms, he hasn't let us know anything about it," Mann added.

Barnes is the left-hander obtained from Tulsa, where he won 13 and lost 11 last year.

Pitcher Lestock has been dropped by the club.

Earl Mann said he was expecting Duck McKee, outfielder, to come to terms soon.

is playing just so Sparkling Sparky Wade is in the game.

BETTER THIS YEAR.

Wade, so Coach Rabenhorst says, is playing a better defensive game this year and is feeding the ball more to teammates. It is recalled, too, that between all this he found opportunity to win scoring honors in the Southeastern Conference this season.

Major Brittain, of Tennessee, likes Kentucky on form. "I can't say Kentucky will win, but I am sure no team is more skilled," he said.

A great southern athlete pulled on a sweatshirt for the last time as Auburn left the floor beaten by Tennessee. He was Gump Akin, the All-Southeastern end, and mentioned prominently on All-American selections.

Johnny Poole, Twenty Grand Sluggum and Van Houten played their final games for Tech. Georgia had too much on the ball for the Jackets last night.

The old tournament atmosphere is hard to beat. And from now on the competition becomes as taut as the string on a fiddle.

Florida and Kentucky, L. S. U. and Alabama play their first games today.

For the second straight year a better than average Florida team meets Kentucky in the first game.

FAMOUS GEORGIA ATHLETES TODAY and YESTERDAY

Frank C. (Hop) Owens.

One of the most interesting and pleasurable phases of this business of being an athletic archaeologist—writing of the men who made our sports headlines of yesterday as well as today—is that of meeting them in person and observing their present occupations.

It is further interesting to note that many of Georgia's outstanding figures in sport have been marked successes in the business world and yet have retained their love for the games that interested them in earlier years.

Frank C. (Hop) Owens, whom you all remember as one of the south's staidest tennis players for many years, is such a case.

A GOLDEN ERA.

"Hop" Owens came along during a golden tennis era in Atlanta. It started in 1907 when Nat Thornton won the southern singles and paired with B. M. Grant Sr. (father of Billy), to win the doubles that year and the year following.

Then came Carlton Y. Smith, an outstanding player; Ed Carter, who captured the South Atlantic doubles several times with J. K. Orr Jr.; Jack Caldwell, whom you might remember as a brilliant tennis career, the players of that period all agree; "Hop" Owens, Jack Hunt, Jack Moore, and so on down to "Betsy" Grant, whom we wrote about the other day.

There were other good men during that period, also, such as there always are during any outstanding period in one particular sport. There was Julian Robertson who paired with Jack Caldwell twice to win the southern doubles and others who will be mentioned later on.

Verily, this was the golden era in southern tennis and the beginning of the sport in this state.

AFTER THORNTON.

"Hop" Owens came along in the wake of Nat Thornton and Carlton Smith. And he added to the laurels already compiled in behalf of the Atlanta Athletic Club by capturing the southern singles in '22, the Georgia state singles in '21-'22, and numerous state titles over the south.

It was a very pleasant surprise to the writer to discover that "Hop" Owens' partner in several state doubles victories was none other than Whitner Cary, formerly a member of The Constitution staff and now the bridge expert for this paper.

Cary and Owens paired to win the North Carolina state doubles in 1928 and 1929, and several other notable doubles victories.

"Whitner Cary was quite a doubles player in those days," "Hop" Owens said, "and he was a good player."

Another interesting discovery for the chronicler of "Famous Athletes" was this one about Mr. Cary.

PARTNER OF DRAPER.

"Hop" Owens, now the partner of our good friend, Jesse Draper, in the well-known real estate firm of Draper, Owens, has a long string of tennis victories to his credit in the annals of the Atlanta Athletic Club, of which he was, of course, a member.

His first singles title was that of 1929, when he won out over all opposition in the Georgia State tournament. He defended his state title successfully in the ensuing years of '21, '22, '23, '24, '25 and '26.

In 1922, he was southern doubles champion.

He also won the state doubles in

"HOP" OWENS.

1921 with Eston Mansfield; in 1924 with Jeff Hunt, and in 1927 with Nat Thornton.

Owens' biggest triumphs, however, came in outside tournaments. He figured in the North Carolina state doubles championship three successive years, winning with Cary in '20 and '21, and with Jack Caldwell in '22.

TENNESSEE CHAMPION.

He won the Tennessee state singles in '21; the Tennessee doubles the same year with Cary the South Carolina state doubles in 1922 and 1924 with Jack Caldwell, and in 1922 with Julian Robertson.

He also paired with Nat Thornton in 1928 to win the North Carolina state doubles.

Owens is now retired from competitive tennis but he still retains a keen zest for the sport. He enjoys a good match, and gets out occasionally for one, himself, although golf is his major form of exercise these days. Almost every Saturday finds him on the links participating in a round with some of his friends. And he shoots a very good score, too.

Last Sunday he had a 73 at Capital City Links with Hugh Carter Jr., Harvey Hill and Roby Robinson.

Among outstanding tennis matches recalled by Owens is one he played with Douglas Waters. He also remembers vividly the memorable 4-set match played between Waters and Carlton Smith for the southern singles championship in 1921.

"Hop" Owens is now a busy businessman. But not too busy to talk tennis when the subject is brought up. (Tomorrow: Nap Rucker.)

HEAVY CHOSEN AS THIRD MAN IN TITLE FIGHT

Leo Shea, Best of Three Licensed Referees, Is Selected.

By Edward J. Neil.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—The Miami boxing commission today chose Leo Shea, a heavyweight himself, to referee Primo Carnera's 15-round heavyweight title defense against Tommy Loughran next Wednesday night as the warriors coasted close to the end of their serious training routine.

Shea, considered the best qualified of the three referees licensed by the commission, weighs 190 pounds, is six feet tall and is over 40 years old. He was named unanimously by the commission after the managers of Carnera and Loughran failed to agree upon a choice themselves.

The two judges who will act in conjunction with the referee will be chosen by the commission Monday. A list of eligible men has been turned over to each camp. From those suitable both to the champion and challenger two will be chosen. Their names will not be known, however, until the fighters step into the ring at Madison Square Garden's stadium Wednesday night.

The fight camp excitement of the day shifted to West Palm Beach, where Loughran, who has been showing brilliantly in training against his sparring partners, Jack Pettifer, Ace Clark and Ed Hogan, entertained the former heavyweight king, Gene Tunney.

Tunney refused to pick a winner but his sympathies appeared entirely with the man who stands out among heavyweights today as the boxing counterpart of the former marine. They once boxed an eight-round no-decision bout in 1922.

"If I didn't think Tommy had a chance, I wouldn't go to the fight," Tunney said after he had watched Loughran punch his big mates all over the training ring, befuddling them with his sharp left jab, his feinting and footwork. "And I'll be there at the ring side."

"It's no sport to see a big man fight a little man, but Tommy is not only a fit opponent for the mammoth Carnera, but he is a good fighter going very rough for him. I never before have seen Loughran look so well. He appears to be ready for the fight of his life."

Loughran stopped on the scales after the workout and weighed in at 186 pounds, his best fighting weight. He will come to Miami Sunday for his second heavy workout in the Garden stadium.

Carnera had another good day on the big amusement pier at South Beach. He boxed seven rounds with Buck Everett, three with Johnny Miller, and two more with Popper Stopper, a clowning negro, and he specialized in dropping short right punches to the head of his sparring partners' left jabs. He landed a few heavyweight right uppercuts on Stopper.

Fielding H. Yost, veteran director of athletics at the University of Michigan and who visited Atlanta only recently in his capacity as a member of the national football rules committee, was a spectator at last night's basketball games at the auditorium.

Mr. Yost, who has been visiting his brother-in-law and close friend, Dan McGugin, in Nashville, said that he just happened to pass through Atlanta and decided to take in the games. The veteran mentor is a basketball fan, as well as a football enthusiast.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(AP)—The New York Yankees today announced receipt of signed contracts from George Uhlen, veteran relief pitcher, and from the recruits, Don Heffner and Harry Smythe.

Joining the Yankees in mid-season last year, Uhlen won six games and lost one in relief roles. Heffner and Smythe both were obtained from Baltimore of the International league. The former will seek the second-base job while Smythe, formerly with the Phillies, will try to land a pitching berth.

In the second half of the Vol-Tiger game, seven field goals were made out of 29 tries.

For Tennessee, Phillips made one for 10; McPherson made four for 10; Kirk for 8; Anderson two for 8; Stafford made four for 7; Felix two for 4; Hendrickson made one for 3; Crumbliss made three for 8; and Foster failed to count in three tries.

Anderson was next in relative accuracy with two for 6, while other Georgia records were as follows: Bowden, two for 7; Johnson, three for 12; O'Kelly, one for 4, and Gibson, one for 6.

The other Tech scorers field attempts were as follows: Glenn, one for 6; Pool, two for 11, and Stacy, one for 8.

McKay's bowling was nothing short of sensational and thrilled the capacity audience as this happy duckpin game triumphed over the United States' stakes champion and topped the cash purse, in which each bowler had posted a sum on a "winner-take-all" basis. Carl Tidwell was second with 634.

STENGEL PILOTS

BROOKLYN CLUB

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Charles D. (Casey) Stengel was engaged today to succeed the departed Max Carey as manager of the Brooklyn baseball club. He signed a two-year contract at a reported salary of $10,000 a year.

The hiring of Casey, veteran of 24 years in the sport, assured Brooklyn fans of getting back the bizarre brand of baseball that Carey in two seasons failed to deliver and with which Stengel is familiar through his eight years' connection with the team—six years as an outfielder and the other two as coach.

"And that's the big job cut out for me—to get the fellows to play entertainingly," Casey said.

For the nonce he expects to work with the material on hand, he tabled the suggestion of immediate trades. The only immediate change he has in mind is the elevation of Chick Fraser, who scouted for the club last year, to his own former post as coach, Stengel indicated that Otto Miller, former Brooklyn catcher and a coach under Carey, although to date unsigned, would be retained on his staff.

The pitching staff will be built around the right-hander, Van Mungo, supported by Owen Carroll, Ray Benze and Walter Beck. Al Lopez will be his first-string catcher.

The outfield and infield berths are undecided, except in the cases of Tony Cuccinello, second baseman; Joe Stripp at third base, and Danny Taylor in the outfield.

"Hack Wilson (whom he had as a player at Toledo) is okay," he said, "but he'll have to qualify for his job." Marty McManus, former Red Sox Manager, and prominently mentioned for the managership of the Dodgers if Stengel didn't accept it, will be used as a utility infielder.

Casey, a shrewd leader and developer of talent, is looking with eagerness to the prospect of training young players.

GOLF FACTS

NOT THEORIES.

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

STRONG LEFT DOES NOT ASSURE LEFT HAND DOMINATION

Many players seem to believe that developing the left arm and hand for the proper swing means building up bulging muscles in these members.

With a right-handed person the left hand is pretty weak. But, so little strength is needed from this side, when it is used properly, that the development most desired is of a mental sort.

A familiarity with the correct movements of this arm and hand is far more important than muscular strength.

By means of the proper body action and a leverage tremendous power can be produced in the action of the left arm and hand.

Learn to think in terms of the correct movements of the members and you'll find that they have ample strength without gymnasium training.

PREACHER IS HELD IN THREE DEATHS

Itinerant Accused of Killing Three, Plotting To End Lives of 4 Others.

PAMPA, Texas, Feb. 23.—(AP)—The Rev. L. H. Shockley, 50-year-old itinerant preacher, was charged today with the poisoning deaths of three persons and a plot to take the lives of four other relatives by marriage in 1930.

The county grand jury indicted him for the fatal poisoning of W. T. Hudgins, his father-in-law; Terry Erwin, son of his wife's sister, and Mrs. Terry Erwin.

An attempt to kill by poison Lloyd and Ernest Erwin, Terry's brothers; their mother, Mrs. Nora Erwin, and her daughter, Mrs. Ruby Bean, was charged.

The indictment alleged the poison was mixed with flour which the family used.

Investigators offered as the asserted motive for the poisonings a desire of the preacher to come into the possession of the $10,000 estate of his father-in-law.

"It was that flour that poisoned us," Mrs. Nora Erwin told authorities. "She of the bread we ate was fed to my father's dog and cat and they both died. It was just an accident that any of us lived."

M. D. Bentley, real estate man at McLean, where all of them lived, said the Hudgins estate consisted of about three sections of land and some money. Bentley was one of several private investigators who worked on the case.

Claude Williams, a McLean attorney, promised the Gray county sheriff that he would surrender Shockley if the evangelist had been at liberty on $5,000 bond granted after the grand jury indicted him recently for Hudgins' death.

He was arrested February 12 at Springfield, Mo., and returned to Pampa.

Shockley said with emphasis, "I plead not guilty," when he was arraigned on the old indictment.

He insisted that he was innocent and said he was willing to face his accusers and match their reputation and character with his.

Hudgins died November 6, 1930. Mrs. Terry Erwin died the day of Hudgins' funeral, November 7, and her husband died December 31, 1930, in Oklahoma City. The others poisoned have never fully recovered.

Mr. Naylor said that this would be one of the most attractive of the Lane stores, and that he was happy to be able to serve the residents of Morningside.

Remodeling of the interior is now going on, but will not interfere with the operation.

MRS. MASSIE WINS DIVORCE IN RENO

RENO, Nev., Feb. 23.—(AP)—The marriage of Thalia Hubbard Fortescue Massie and Lieutenant Thomas Hedges Massie, young naval lieutenant involved in the sensational Honolulu murder trial of 1932, was ended in a speedy Reno divorce trial today.

Charges of extreme mental cruelty, the particulars of which were given privately by Mrs. Massie before the locked doors of Judge Benjamin F. Currier's court, won her a divorce decree in less than 10 minutes.

Mrs. Massie's attorney asked the court for a private trial, mandatory under Nevada law when requested by either party to a divorce action, and court bailiffs ordered an eager crowd from the courtroom.

A few minutes later it was all over and the young matron, daughter of Mrs. Granville Fortescue, socially prominent in Washington, D. C., left the court building in the company of her attorney and witness, who certified she had been a resident here six weeks.

She wore a black crepe dress, trimmed in white, with black hat and coat to match.

Mrs. Massie reiterated previous statements that today's divorce proceedings "had absolutely no connection" with the Honolulu assault case, which attracted world-wide attention.

The assault upon Mrs. Massie, allegedly by a group of natives, was followed by the slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, and the trial for his murder of Lieutenant Massie, Mrs. Massie's mother, and two enlisted men of the navy. Convicted of manslaughter, their sentence was commuted soon after the verdict.

Two Fliers Saved,
One Lost in Sea
NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Two army aviators were rescued tonight by the navy destroyer Barnard after bobbing for five hours on their crippled plane on the Atlantic ocean off Long Island and watching a companion fall to death in the icy, wind-swept water.

The fliers, forced down just after taking off for Langley Field, Va., were brought to the Brooklyn Navy hospital "in fair condition."

Those rescued were Lieutenant James H. Rothrock, of Washington, D. C., and Lieutenant William S. Pocock, of Detroit.

Lieutenant George F. McDermott, of Pittsburgh, was washed into the sea by a wave after he once had pulled himself to safety aboard the sinking plane.

The Barnard saved the two pilots after army and police planes and coast guard vessels had searched in vain for the missing plane, which was wrecked in a police plane crash within 100 yards of the plane, but was forced down by a frozen rudder and taxied back to shore through the heavy sea.

MAN IS FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL ROOM HERE
A man identified by papers as Warren Murrin, about 50 or 60 years old, was found dead in his room at a hotel at 120 Edgewood avenue Friday, according to police reports.

Police said that the Grady hospital ambulance was called for the man Friday morning, but was not able to answer the call promptly because of the heavy press of work, and a police car was sent to the hotel. The man was removed to Grady hospital in an ambulance of H. M. Patterson & Son and was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital. He had been ill for several days, it was said.

Postage Stamp Exhibition, Dinner To Be Held Today at Henry Grady

Thousands of stamps from practically every country in the world will go on display at 2 o'clock this afternoon when the doors of the third annual exhibition of the Atlanta Stamp Society are thrown open to the public continuously until 11 o'clock tonight.

Thousands of persons, including school children, will be accommodated at the exhibition, which will include copies of practically every stamp publication, weekly and monthly, printed in the country, tables containing the latest stamp catalogs, albums and accessories for the hobby and frame upon frame of stamps mounted by hand as well as to display their interesting features and beauty.

One frame will be of especial interest. It is the Belgium set showing King Albert, who was buried Thursday. The set of obituary stamps is a beautiful example of the engravers' art and is seldom seen complete. The set was issued in 1925 to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the first Belgian postage stamp.

The annual dinner of the society will be held at 6 o'clock tonight at the Henry Grady. Between 50 and 75 collectors will be present. Of interest to those attending the dinner will be a list of prizes, including stamps, stamp publications, stock books and other stamp articles which will be awarded during the dinner to contest winners.

The society issues a cordial invitation to all to attend the exhibition and all stamp collectors are invited to attend the dinner. Tickets for the dinner may be obtained at the door up to 6 o'clock.

In Georgia's Fields and Streams
By H. A. CARTER

VITAL STATISTICS.
Some species of fish, such as suckers, lay enormous numbers of eggs, yet the population of that species in any one region tends to remain constant.

Out of two million eggs, which makes a nice average figure to start from, only two will ever come to maturity. Some of our acturaries and other mathematically minded folk might try figuring out the mortality rate on that. My interest is not so much in the survivors but in those that perish.

Morbid, did you say?
What becomes of the other one million, nine hundred ninety-nine thousand, nine hundred and ninety-eight fish? To begin with, some of the eggs will probably be eaten by some insect, or by a turtle that happens to stray that way. Other sorts of fish are not above eating the spawn, either. That reduces the thing at once to about 10 per cent. The rest come to the fry stage, we will assume. Now they shall it in real danger. Fish begin to disappear via the bellies of other fish. They get tangled in mossy plants, and die there. They fall prey to still other sorts of insects, such as the predaceous diving beetles. Or, if you choose, let every egg that is laid hatch and develop for a space free of enemies. The eventuality is that there is not enough food there for them, and the population is slowly but inevitably thinned as the weaker succumb to malnutrition and weakness. In the end, after generations have passed in review, I will still have one fish for each parent out of every single mass of spawn.

Then somebody that wants a lot of fish goes down to the lake and sets traps or dynamites the place, and does his fishing with a lay rake. Or some factory starts dumping highly charged industrial wastes into the headwaters, and the fish sail downstream, not in retreat, but belly to the sun, gone forever from waters that once were home.

That is why the streams and waters of Georgia are not alive with fish today. The slim chance of survival is completely wiped out. What shall it profit the fish—shall we say—if he come to maturity only to have the swim bladder ruptured by the shock of exploding dynamite? When I consider conditions as I see them in making my studies near the waters of this

Eats First Oyster And Finds a Pearl

ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 23.—(UP)—Miss Bess Carragher never was able to understand how people could eat oysters—until today. Miss Carragher decided to take the leap. She ordered oysters in a local restaurant and went to work on them with a will.

She emerged with what a local jeweler described as "a perfect pearl." It is to be inspected by an expert to determine its value.

ROGERS TO LECTURE
HERE ON THEOSOPHY

L. W. Rogers, of Chicago, author and lecturer, who was for 11 years president of the American Theosophical Society, will begin a course of five free lectures on Sunday night at the Hotel Biltmore, which are sponsored by the Atlanta Theosophical Society.

The first lecture will deal with the origin of the soul and the evolution of human consciousness, setting forth the theosophical idea that the human being is essentially divine and has latent within him the powers and attributes of the Supreme Being.

Other lectures will deal with the power of thought and its successful use in shaping fate, the scientific and clairvoyant evidence which show that the human being survives the death of his body and with various deductions about death. Psychic research, Mr. Rogers says, has now become a recognized science since Harvard University has an endowed chair for that work.

The lecturer, who 20 years ago abandoned journalism for the work he now has in hand, recently returned from a lecture tour through England, India and Australia.

ARKANSAS FUGITIVE HELD IN NEW ORLEANS
NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Harvey A. McKay, 35, was arrested here today at the home of a daughter on a Missouri fugitive warrant charging him with murder at Holland, Mo.

New Orleans detectives said they had been advised by Sheriff S. E. Jaden, of Pemiscot county, Missouri, that McKay was wanted in connection with the slaying last Saturday night at Holland of Will Taylor, reported to have been slugged to death in the neighborhood of a beer parlor operated by McKay.

state, I marvel that even catfish can still be found. Vital statistics in the fish world have been generally high. You can't even count on two in two million living their lives out to any reasonable length.

G.O.P. COMMITTEES DISAGREE ON DRIVE

House and Senate Bodies To Proceed Alone in Vote This Fall.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Failing to agree on a program of action with the national committee, the senate and house republican campaign committees decided today to combine and proceed alone in the party drive upon the democratic congressional majorities this fall.

Senator Hastings, of Delaware, head of the senatorial committee, and Representative Bolton, of Ohio, chairman of the congressional committee, announced in a joint statement the plan to conduct the campaign without the assistance of the national committee headed by Everett Sanders, of Indiana.

The statement said the joint committee would have the "full co-operation" of the national organization but it added the latter would "take no part in the campaign activities of the combined senatorial and congressional committees."

Hastings would not elaborate on this statement, but other republican leaders said there had been a failure on the part of the senate and house groups to "get together" with the national committee.

Sanders, about whose continuance as national chairman there has been some factional dispute, was said in authoritative quarters to have advised beginning the campaign this year in June. The senate and house chiefs, however, thought it should start sooner.

Also there were said to be differences over financial aid, the national committee having little to offer in that direction.

The joint statement announced a public bureau would be set up here under the direction of Warren W. Wheaton, for 10 years a Washington correspondent for the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Rare Bargains in The

Brilliant Decorations Are Featured At Driving Club Sigma Delta Dance

Featuring a color motif of gold and black effectively carried out in the beautiful decorations, the Sigma Delta Club dance held last evening at the Piedmont Driving Club was a highlight of the week for members of the high school and college sets. The club shield, illuminated with gold lights on a black ground reflecting the club colors, was suspended above the fireplace at the eastern end of the club ballroom. At either side of the fireplace were magnolia trees with glossy black foliage and bright yellow blossoms.

The slender pillars at the edge of the dance floor were garlanded with amaranth and half of the posts were decorated with strings of tiny yellow lights, while the alternate posts were adorned with clusters of black and gold balloons. The balcony and the orchestra platform were banked with palms and ferns and decorated with black and gold balloons. A feature of the dance after intermission was a shower of golden and black balloons and quantities of confetti in the same colors which were released from the ceiling and floated upon the dancers. Preceding the dance members of the club and their escorts were entertained at dinner, when yellow flowers centered the decoration of the tables and the other appointments reflected the chosen color motif. Following the dance the same group was entertained at breakfast at Druid Hills Golf Club. Chapters included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Butters, Mr. and Mrs. Inman Gray, Judge and Mrs. Walter Colquitt and Mr. and Mrs. Howard See. The guests were received by the officers who were attractive figures in their smart evening gowns. Miss Nell Winslow, president, was gowned in shell pink crepe trimmed at the neck, arms and back with dainty ruffles of flesh-tinted mousseline de soie. Miss Marie Scott, vice president, wore a gown of white flat crepe fashioned with a heavily beaded bodice. Miss Frances Butters, secretary, chose a gown of crimson colored crepe trimmed around the neckline with crystal beads. The treasurer, Miss Anne Gray, was gowned in white flat crepe trimmed with ruffles of the same material.

The members included Misses Anne Walker, Amelia Hewlett, Lawson Carter, Henrietta Collier, Gladys Lantz, Editha Cleatwood, Gracie Wincoff, Julia Colquitt, Mae Morrow, Roberta Crew, Hilda Brown, Clara Belle Huffman, Jean Oliver, Mary Anne Nolan, Ida Stephens, Marion Mobley, Helen June Roberts, Van Spalding, Martha Harrington, Gertrude Adkins, Lois Merriam, Caroline Schaff, Elizabeth See, Mary Louise Blanchard and Mildred Bradley. Baron DeKalb DAR Gives Tea Honoring Mrs. Julian McCurry

The George Washington tea at which the Baron DeKalb Chapter, D. A. R., of Decatur, entertained yesterday at the U. D. C. chapter house, honoring Mrs. Julian McCurry, state regent, Georgia division, D. A. R., was the outstanding event of the chapter's winter program, and was attended by representative women over Georgia.

The short business session presided over by Mrs. Carl Hudgins, the regent featured reports on the subject of the essay.

Mrs. McCurry was introduced and presented flowers by Mrs. John Montgomery. The message stressed loyalty and patriotism and was followed by greetings from other guests.

A receiving line headed by Mrs. Hudgins and Mrs. McCurry formed at the south wing of the auditorium. Music was rendered by Mrs. Henry Harrison, Mrs. Dan Miller and Miss Frances Burgess.

The lace-covered tea table held as a center decoration a cherry tree laden with red cherries arising from a mound of grass. Silver candelabra with tall red candles and red and white mints carried out the George Washington idea.

The auditorium was decorated with United States flags and vases of red carnations. A flag was on display outside the building, which is a custom of the chapter when and where a meeting is being held.

The Robert Sallette chapter, C. A. R., assisted in the entertainment of the 150 guests.

Atlanta Better Films Committee Gives Dinner Featured by Program

Washington's birthday dinner of the Atlanta Better Films Committee was held in Rich's tea room Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock, with 100 guests present. The tables were beautifully decorated by Mrs. A. W. Waldman, assisted by Mesdames Warren D. White, T. C. Perkins, Fred Burrus and J. C. Kinsey. The flowers, a gift from Mrs. Patrick Bray, former president of the Atlanta Better Films Committee, whose home is now in Clearwater, Fla., were orange blossoms, poinsettias, cedar and the brilliant berries of the Brazilian pepper tree. Pictures of George and Martha Washington, with hunting in red, white and blue, adorned tables and walls.

The program was arranged by Mrs. C. F. Angell and Mrs. Alva G. Maxwell. Pupils of Mrs. Albert Carroll Summer gave a group of songs; Madrigal, quartet from "The Mikado," sung by Miss Evelyn Angell and Miss Elise Jamieson, W. V. Nichols and Ralph Puckett. Miss Evelyn Angell sang a Japanese love song by Blake. Gifted little pupils of Mrs. C. E. Lafontaine, accompanied by Mrs. E. C. Fumero, gave costume dances. Mrs. Maxwell led a unique Washington exercise participated in by many of the guests. She also read an original poem modeled on Kipling's "L'Envoi." Mrs. T. C. Perkins, city review chairman, reported 32 first-run pictures reviewed, nine of them being star pictures at the larger theaters. Mrs. Fred Burrus, review chairman for the community houses, reported a total of 285 pictures reviewed for the month of February.

J. W. Setze Jr., president of the Better Films Committee, made a talk explaining the status of the Sunday movies, of which he is director, for the benefit of the Scotch Rite Children's hospital. Although only 11 years of age, this young lady showed excellent style in form and subject.

The composite story being written by the members is reaching a climax and Mrs. Dillon Akers, a most versatile writer, will prepare the chapter for this month. Mrs. Young and Mrs. J. M. Dodd added lines to the composite poem and Mrs. T. H. Porch and Mrs. H. Stakeley were selected to write the next two lines. Original biographies of some outstanding character, not to exceed 500 words in length, will be presented by each member at the next meeting.

Now Let Us Turn To "LITTLE MEN"!

Don't make them "Little Lord Fauntleroy," make them little MEN! Their clothes should be sturdy and durable, but just as fine and up-to-date as father's (that they like to mimic). Allen's Boys' Department never forgets little men, nor what they want.

INSTALLMENT XVIII.

Charity was lying on the balcony reading the next afternoon when she heard Doug's phone ring. She didn't realize she was sitting so near his windows, and was surprised to hear his deep, pleasant voice answering.

So he was at home! They hadn't met since he slept in her room at Templehaven. For a moment she wanted to get up and walk away.

But she didn't want to be conspicuous about it. So she lay quietly, and was not surprised to learn it was Yanner. She didn't really mean to eavesdrop. But she couldn't help hearing Doug say, almost coolly, "Yes—

Yanner?"

There was a short silence. Then

Doug's voice again, calm and unthrilled, "I was busy. Yes, I'm going to be busy this afternoon, too. Chickie

Belle is coming up to pose. I want to get the picture finished in time for the Junior League exhibition."

There was another silence. Then

Doug—defiantly! "Yes, Chickie was down for the week-end—and so were 20 other people. What of it?"

They were quarreling. Charity found herself leaning on her elbow, straining so she would not miss a word. Doug said hotly, "Yes, Charity was down. She was very sweet about it. I've told you I'm going to have dinner home tonight with her. She's a good egg—and I'm not going to embarrass her any more than I can help."

Doug was defending her—and quarreling with Yanner about it. It could be possible! She heard Doug say, angrily, "I won't be there!"

Then his receiver clicked viciously.

Not wanting Doug to know she had heard, Charity walked back toward her windows swiftly. Then she had a sudden impulse to talk with her.

Humming a little tune under her breath, her magazine under her arm,

she walked back.

He was sitting by the window gazing out at Central Park. She pretended great surprise when she came abreast of him.

"Greetings!" She found she could smile gaily at him.

"Come into my igloo," he grinned and opened the door. "You've never seen my shack?"

Charity was happy that she was in the gold silk sport frock she and Billie had bought at Mme. Bordeaux's.

She knew she looked as well as it was possible for her to look. She looked around the handsome bachelor apartment done in black and gold, and down at her frock. "I just match,"

she said brightly, and Doug grinned again.

"You fit in very nicely. A new dress?"

"Mercy, yes!" Charity threw her self down in a big chair and made an entirely figure. "We bought out all of Fifth Avenue yesterday. My check book is all worn out."

"Great! If all your duds look as well as that yellow bib you're going to knock 'em green with envy."

She hadn't time to answer before

Doug's phone rang. In a panic she started to get up. It was probably Yanner calling back. Doug motioned for her to stay.

"Hello. Yes, Chickie. Oh, that's tough. Well, nothing we can do about it. Okay. Some other time."

He hung up petulantly. Charity was surprised to find herself suddenly seized with a feeling of relief. That slant-eyed dancer! But thank goodness, she wasn't coming to pose. Doug frowned.

"It was Chickie. I wanted to finish the picture this afternoon, and she has a rehearsal. I want to enter it in the Junior League exhibit next week for the unemployed."

Charity was hit with a bold idea—

an idea which almost struck her dumb. She said nervously, "Maybe—

I could help you?"

Doug looked puzzled. "Do you know someone who could pose—some one near Chickie's type?"

"She doesn't have red hair—but she's about the same height. And I dare say she's just about as shapely." "Call her," Doug said eagerly.

"I'm all through with the head and face. I just wanted to put a few finishing touches to the body."

Charity got up—her knees trembling.

"She—she's here now. I'll have her on the balcony beside the palm in five minutes."

Doug grinned happily. "That's a break! Who is she?"

Charity smiled enigmatically and blew him a little farewell kiss as she walked out. Then she went to her room, to sit on her bed shakily, turning ice cold at her boldness. What had possessed her to do such a thing?

But after all, why not? He was her husband. Women like Chickie

Belle were dangerous. Mercenary, heartless—hateful. Douglas Brookhart

Temple had given Charity half his fortune just to keep Doug from getting tangled with women of her sort. She could ruin Doug—hopelessly—wreck his life and spoil his happiness.

It would be the most embarrassing moment of her life. But if Doug needed a model, why shouldn't she be the one to pose? Billie had assured her she was as beautiful as any of the girls on the beach for the weekend.

Hastily Charity stepped out of her clothes, and into a brilliant Chinese robe she and Billie had bought. Her breath was coming in gasps when she looked out and saw Doug standing outside her windows, in his hands the large fan Chickie Belle had been posing with.

Opening the door and walking out was like a plunge into icy waters. But

Doug had asked her if she would go out with him in the evening. She was so happy she did not even realize in which direction she was going.

Suddenly she stopped still.

She was in the heart of New York's east side. There was a great commotion. She gathered her senses and realized she was in a crowd. Then all the brightness went out of her day.

On the sidewalk in front of her sat

a man in a wheel chair. Nearby stood his wife, weeping. Four little children clung to her skirts. She held another in her thin, white arms. And out of the tenement beside them two husky men were throwing miserable sticks of furniture.

Sick with pity, Charity felt herself drawn to the side of the woman. She bent over to say tenderly, "Is— isn't there something I can do, my dear?"

The eyes that lifted to Charity's were hollow with grief. The woman shook her head dazedly. "Nothing."

There was nothing anybody can do. We've got to get out."

"You're—being dispossessed?" Charity looked at the broken old furniture and back to the pinched face of the mother.

The man answered bitterly, his hand clenched savagely on the arms of his wheel chair. "Thrown out because we can't pay our rent. And after we've lived here seven years and paid every penny up to three months ago when I busted my back."

"But—surely," Charity choked miserably, "they couldn't do that. Where will you go?"

The woman laughed hollowly. "To the river I guess—all of us."

Charity looked at the five little children, the baby whimpering hungrily—the helpless father, the bitter, disheveled mother. Something had to be done. She turned to an officer standing quietly by.

"What is the owner of this building? He—he can't put these people out like this. It's brutal."

The deputy marshal shrugged indif-ferently. "He can't, can't he?"

Well, he's put more than a hundred families out in this block in the last week because they didn't have no dough."

TILE INDUSTRY SHOWS WIDE GAINS

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER.
The W YORK, Feb. 23.—(P)—The latter months of 1933, has 1934 with an outburst of ac-erating conditions have been lly improved through elimination t-throat competition by the NKA Standard Statistics Co., in a survey, says operating conditions, ly due to the codes, "are now the soundest basis since before the Rising cot- ton production codes. Rising cot- ton production codes. Rising cot-prices, during the summer months, also carry in commodity markets, also stirred speculative buying of fabrics.

Inventories Moved.

But these big inventories then built up have been moved. Raw cotton has again pushed upward, exceeding the peak prime of last summer. Cotton mills are again quickening activity in goods contracted for at higher prices than last summer, and in many cases with profit margins more satis-

The Standard survey says that average prices for all fabrics are currently some 50 per cent above the levels prevailing a year ago, while cotton, which account for some 70 per cent of the total textile business, show even wider price advances.

A tabulation of 1933 earnings of 17 textile and apparel companies shows an aggregated net of $11,112,000, in contrast with a deficit of $18,- £50,000 in 1932, and somewhat smaller deficits in 1931 and 1930. In 1929, the aggregate net was only £5,039,000.

Woolen Line Successful.

The woolen division of the industry was more successful than others in 1933 in raising the prices of its fabrics promptly, while using raw fibre purchased at depression lows.

Consumption of cotton and wool fibres for 1933 were the largest since 1929, and of rayon fibres, the largest on record. Silk consumption, however, dropped to the lowest in a long time, as the branch of the textile industry became embroiled in labor troubles, and production was virtually suspended for three months.

Regarding the NRA codes, Standard states that while the codes are still under revision, "it may be stated positively that the position of the industry is being vastly improved by these

was having. Earlier in the evening the hostess had said "When you are tired of bridge I have one game for you."
She did not really expect that there would be any interest, but soon she had a noisy group playing "Whistle."
A table, a pack of cards, a group,
each one of whom had decided privately upon a tune they could whistle, were the requisites.
The dealer dealt the cards face down. The first player turned a card face up, starting a new pile beside her face-down one. The second player turned a card, starting her new pile.
If the card turned up happened to be the same denomination as the one turned by the first player the two pointed to each other and the one who could first whistle the bars of her tune handed over her card to the slower member.
The third person turned a card and so on. The game is won when a member has been able to pass all her cards to other players. When the game has been going for some time and the packs of turned up cards is quite thick there is even more incentive to could not form their lips to whistle, so then they decided to imitate the sound of an animal in place of whistling a tune. Each player took one animal. Another game they played was a variation of "Beast, bird and fish."

The person who is "it" points with disconcerting suddenness to another player, saying, "Land" or "Water," or "Air." When "Land" is said the person pointed at must give the name of an animal before the person pointing can count seven. If "Water" is said, then the person pointed at must name a fish and if "Air" is said the person must give the name of a bird.
Ghost, the game which calls for spelling and which was familiar to all the members was played also.
When a person has missed once, he becomes a third of a ghost. Two misses makes him two thirds and three a full ghost. And ghosts must not be spoken to, on penalty of the speaker himself becoming ghostly.

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD

A correspondent wants to know what jealousy is and how it may be cured. Since the beginning of time men and women have asked this question. Philosophers, psychologists, fiction writers, poets and conversationalists have discussed jealousy. They have described it, defined it, commented upon it, but no one of them has succeeded in prescribing a cure for it. A great philosopher said that jealousy was as cruel as the grave.

A great poet spoke of it as the green eyed monster that mocked the meat it fed upon. A great psychologist remarked that it was impossible to picture the shame and degradation to which a jealous man would descend without quail of conscience and that a lofty man whose love was pure and full of self-sacrifice would stoop to low practices goaded by jealousy. A great novelist points out that highly imaginative minds are given to jealousy.

Jealousy is a congenital disease and when the patient is in the midst of an attack many of his normal functions are paralyzed. Actually bile is stirred up in the system to such an extent that digestion stops and appetite is lost. The nervous system is excited to such a degree that sleep is impossible and normal work or play is out of the question.
Like a captured and tortured animal in a cage, surrounded and around pursued by the devil, the mind of the jealous man is in a state of confusion until it is convinced that the in-sanities it has conjured up are real and incontrovertible.

So there are definitions, descriptions, theories, plenty about jealousy, about the ravages it works, the wretchedness it causes—but where can one find intelligent prescription for its cure?

"Oh, one will say, 'bring reason to bear upon it, we'll the pain it inflicts on the person who experiences it as well as on the person of whom it is felt; think of the utter futility of it to accomplish anything but injury of the heart that harbors it and sorrow to the one at whom it is directed.' That sounds fine. But—when you are in the dentist chair, flinching in anticipation of the dentist's crashing down upon a quivering nerve you sometimes try to reason with yourself in this way: 'This is only a tiny tooth that you are carrying on your own cowardly. Be calm!
Don't think about the possibility of more pain but steady yourself and endure what is actual without agonizing over a potentiality.' Does that help much? You continue to quiver with fear, to clutch the arm of the unfriendly chair and if you can exercise enough self-control to keep the dentist from seeing your panic you count it a victory. The fear is in the control, and the pain is actually, wide-range imagination gives each free play.

"What thin partitions sense from thought divide."

Dostoevski says that many a man knows perfectly well that his wife would die rather than deceive him rests securely in this faith so long as she is in his sight, yet as soon as she gets out of sight he begins to conjure up all sorts of fancies as to what she may be doing and saying in the presence of some other man. He can't reason himself out of this insanity any more than he can cure a congenital heart disease by reason.

But there is further proof of the thorough unreasonableness of jealousy. Many a woman is jealous of her husband's former wife who is dead and buried or of a wife whom her husband divorced because he hated her. Many a man is jealous of his wife's former sweetheart on whom she turned her back to marry him. The fact the former sweetheart is himself happily married to some other woman doesn't help matters a bit.

We laugh at the little child jealous of the new baby in the home that takes his place in his mother's arms.
We laugh at the lover pining for the woman he loves, while his girl is dating some other fellow. We laugh at the wife who can't hear the conversation in which she is engaged because she is trying to hear what her husband is saying to the woman across the room. We laugh at them but we are taking our amusement at the expense of an anguish we have not experienced and cannot appreciate.

We all pay a big price for our loves. None pays so high a price as the jealous one. He or she dies a thousand deaths for love and suffers to the limit of endurance in each.

PRESS ACCOUNTS CALLED SAFEGUARD AGAINST SMALLPOX

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(P)—
The best way to prevent a smallpox epidemic is for the newspapers to report a few cases in town.

So says Dr. L. M. Graves, superintendent of the city health department, and Dr. S. L. Wadley, chief of the division of communicable diseases.

Dr. Wadley explains:
"Whenever a case of smallpox is reported in the newspapers, people decide to be vaccinated and to have their children vaccinated. If several cases are reported, hundreds are vaccinated."
And Dr. Graves adds:
"Probably if the city had no small-pox for 10 or 12 years there would be so many people who had neglected to be vaccinated that when somebody brought smallpox into the city from outside it would cause a serious epidemic."

SUDDEN STORM WHIPS NOVA SCOTIA COAST

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 23.—(P)— Roaring up suddenly from the southeast, a 45-mile an hour gale, accompanied by beating rain, lashed Nova Scotia today, paralyzing coastal shipping, severing power lines and disrupting communication with different sections of the province.

So powerful was the gale that an empty bus car was blown over on a siding in the path of a switching locomotive.

Halifax was bereft of power when the wind snapped off a pole in the downtown section.

AAA ANSWERS CRITICS OF FARM PRICE POLICY

Davis Says Communism Cry
Is "Red Herring" for Distributors' Benefit.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(P)—
The farm administration, called communist because of its milk policy, uttered this reply today:
"Red herrings."

Chester C. Davis, agricultural adjustment administrator, said the milk control policy is aimed at better prices for farmers and less for milk companies.

"That is the only issue involved," he said. "It should not be confused by charges of communism, or any other red herrings."

About 100 members of congress distributed a mass attack on the milk plan Wednesday night. After hearing such epithets as "communists," "theorists" and "dreamers," they passed a resolution condemning the plan.

Representative Joe H. Eagle, democrat, Texas, is leading a movement to alter the policy. Secretary Wallace recently announced figures showing some distributors made 14 to 30 per cent profits.

"If Representative Eagle," said Davis, "believes we should go back to the former policy of supporting the distributors' spreads and profits, he should say so."

"It is not the policy of the administration to lower prices to producers in a single milkshed. Wherever farmers have felt that the price they were getting was not fair, we have urged them to make the undertaking on their own initiative."

"But if the federal government assumes responsibility for enforcement
by law of a farm price for fluid milk, the government must first establish that such a price is reasonably coordinated with local conditions."

New Trial To Be Asked For Scottsboro Duo

DECATUR, Ala., Feb. 23.—(P)— Another legal setback in the "Scottsboro case" will be made here tomorrow, as attorneys for two of the nine negro defendants under death sentence argue a motion for a new trial.

The two negroes, Clarence Patterson and Clarence Norris, were convicted and sentenced to death here last December on charges of attacking
Mrs. Victoria Price aboard a Southern railway freight train in Jackson county on March 25, 1931.

In briefs filed to support motions
the attorneys for the negroes raised several alleged grounds for new trials.
